NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Gen. Hooker in Consultation with the Authorities.

Good Condition of the Army of the Potomac.

More Nominations Sent to the Senate.

Animated Debates in Both Houses.

SENATOR WILSON ON DISLOYALTY.

Grand Stirring Up of Vallandigham and other Copperheads.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Gen. Hooker has been in the city, and was to-day in consultation with the President and Secretary of War.

Late accounts from the Army of the Potomac indicate greatly improved discipline, and give promise of a state of efficiency never before known there. Expeditions are making successful forays against the enemy, capturing supplies and gaining valuable information, and the business of smuggling goods into the rebel lines is nearly terminated. Desertion is becoming a serious enterprise, and is rapidly diminishing, and the frequent captures of mails going to Richmond bids fair to destroy that heretofore flourishing branch of treason. Our scouting system is admirably organized, and at last we are able to know something of the position, force and plans of the rebels. Our cavalry arm has shared the general improvement, and now, under Gen. STONEMAN, may safely be said to equal in efficiency that of STUART'S.

SENATOR WILSON ON THE COPPERHEADS.

Senator WILSON'S speech, to-day, in reply to the Copperhead arguments in favor of treason, is pronounced the most scathing invective which has lately disturbed the decorous echoes of the Senate Chamber. In alluding to the Democratic Convention at Frankfort, lately dispersed by Gen. GILLEM, he described it as an assemblage of "banded traitors," and denounced the Senator who attempted to defend them as no better than they. Mr. POWELL in reply, gave vent to a burst of treasonable rage, disgraceful alike to his State and his position.

At the time of closing our dispatch (midnight) both Houses are still in session, with a fair prospect of an all-night session. The Senate is engaged in discussing the right of habeas corpus, and the House is debating the Conscription bill. Messrs. VALLANDIGHAM, BINGHAM, VOORHEES and OLIN all made strong speeches—that of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM being even stronger in sentiment than in rhetoric. The galleries have been crowded all the evening, and several passages of Mr. BINGHAM'S speech were rapturously applauded. Messrs. VALLANDIGHAM and VOORHEES received the congratulations of HENRY MAY and kindred spirits. Secretary CHASE was an interested listener.

THE FINANCIAL CONFERENCE COMMITTEE.

Before the Financial Conference Committee was announced, it seems that Senator HUNTER was substituted in place of Senator LATHAM. No meeting has yet been had, but the Committee has been notified of a meeting for to-morrow. This delay seems favorable to the policy of the Administration, which evidently is in earnest in pushing its measures.

THE AMBULANCE CORPS BILL.

A special meeting of the Senate Military Committee has been called on to-morrow to consider the Ambulance Corps bill, which is strongly urged by leading officers in the army.

THE ORDNANCE DEPOT AT WEEHAWKEN.

The Secretary of War, Gen. TOWNSEND and Gen. RUSSE, have addressed a note to the Military Committee of the two houses, urging immediate action on the proposition for an Armory and Ordnance Depot at Weehawken.

NOMINATIONS.

The President to-day sent to the Senate the following nominations:

To be Paymasters, with rank of Major—Jonah Gale, Illinois; Wm. Wood, New-Jersey; C. C. Clark, Connecticut; L. B. Webb, Ohio; Edwin Fly, Maine; Justus Felps, New-York; Joshua Kamer, Pennsylvania; John Brotherlise, Pennsylvania; Charles W. Sweet, New-York.

To be Quartermasters with the rank of Captain—Charles A. Raley, Nebraska; Thomas H. McDill, Wisconsin; C. M. Sampson, Massachusetts; S. J. Wright, Michigan; J. F. Hasteine, Wisconsin; A. F. Dunton, New-York; R. C. God, Western Virginia.

Commissaries of Subsistence with the rank of Captain—W. F. Young and S. B. Trainor, Massachusetts; John L. Carson, Nebraska; James C. Banks, Indiana.

To be Assistant Surgeons—William Gunstead and E. C. Reynolds, Missouri; A. C. Schwarzwelder, Ohio; J. Q. Adams, New-York.

GEN. M'CLELLAN.

Instead to the telegraphic summons sent him to state here and testify, Gen. MCCLELLAN inquired as to the points of evidence desired. He was answered that the examination would be too general to allow a specification, to which he responded with a question as to when he was wanted. A peremptory summons was to-day sent to him to appear forthwith.

PRISONERS WHO HAVE DIED.

List of National prisoners who have died in Southern hospitals has been obtained by Col. LUDLOW, Commissioner for the exchange of prisoners, and placed in the hands of Surg.-Gen. HAMMOND. It includes about four hundred names and will immediately be published.

GEN. PHELPS.

Gen. PHELPS, Military Governor of Arkansas, is here, and it is understood that he desires a command in the field, instead of his present position.

GEN. BUTLER'S COMMAND.

It is now stated on good authority that Gen. BUTLER has been reassigned to the Department of the Gulf, which is made to embrace Alabama as well as Louisiana. Gen. BANKS will go to Texas.

PUNISHMENT OF OFFICERS.

Joseph Hanson, First Lieutenant Nineteenth Maine Volunteers, has been tried by Court-martial at Falmouth, and convicted of conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline, in having uttered his resignation when in front of the enemy, on the ground that he regretted the President's Emancipation Proclamation as unconstitutional and unconstitutional, and in consequence sold and consequently serve under it. He was sentenced to be dismissed with his pay and allowances. The sentence was disapproved by Major-Gen. DIX and Senior in the Island, and the latter "earnestly recommends that this officer shall be dishonorably dismissed the service, with the loss of all pay and allowances." By direction of the President, the above recommendation is approved, and will be immediately carried into effect.

By a General Order just issued, the following officers having been detected in forwarding to the North stolen property belonging to the United States, are dishonorably dismissed the service:

Col. L. P. CAMPBELL, Fourth New-York Cavalry.

Surgeon T. M. HILL, Twenty-seventh Connecticut Volunteers.

Capt. J. P. POLEY, Assistant Adjutant-General United States Volunteers, is dismissed the service for having been taken prisoner and paroled while struggling on the march; an offence which it was his duty as an officer to correct in others, instead of committing himself.

FREE LETTERS FOR SOLDIERS.

The Postal Reform bill which passed the House on Saturday, contains an important provision authorizing soldiers in camp and hospital to send and receive letters free of postage.

NEWSPAPERS IN THE ARMY.

The report that the Philadelphia Inquirer had been prohibited in the army proves to be incorrect. Gen. PARSONS, the Provost-Marshal, telegraphs that no such order has been issued from his office, and the Assistant Adjutant-General adds that no paper has been stopped from coming to the army. The mistake arose from the newspaper agent having failed on the day specified to receive his copies of the Inquirer.

THE CONVENTION WITH PERU.

Mr. SUMNER'S bill, introduced into the Senate Saturday, to carry into effect the Convention between the United States and Peru, of January, 1863, provides that a Commission shall be appointed for the adjustment of all claims preferred by citizens of the two Governments—the Commission to hold their sessions at Lima. The bill fixes the salaries of the Commissioners at $5,000 per annum and mileage, and also provides for a solicitor and clerk.

VISITING THE ARMY.

Senator McDOUGAL left on Saturday on a visit to the camp of Gen. HOOKER.

THE OLD CAPITOL COMMISSION.

The Military Commission, appointed by Gen. MARTINDALE, Military Governor, to try the most important cases at the Old Capitol Prison, assembled to-day. It consists as follows:

Col. C. RUSS, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth New-York Volunteers.

Lieut.-Col. FAY, Tenth New-Jersey Volunteers.

Major G. F. NICHOLS, One Hundred and Eighteenth New-York Volunteers.

Capt. E. G. PARKER, Assistant Adjutant-General, Judge-Advocate and Recorder.

It is understood the Judge-Advocate will bring before them for speedy hearing, all cases involving severe punishment.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

THE DISABLING OF THE OSSIPEE, ETC.

The Secretary of the Navy officially reports to the Senate, that the disabling of the Ossipee resulted from the cutting of the cylinder slide valves, caused by the softness of the iron, which was very basily fitted. Four hulls of vessels have been built on this plan. Ten have similar machinery, of which eight have been tried, two only giving way. The trouble with the Ossipee and Juniata was because their builders were inexperienced, and had neither proper shops, tools, mechanics nor engineers.

With regard to the failure of the Pensacola, Chief Engineer ISHERWOOD reports that she was built at Pensacola, and the machinery at Washington, from designs of E. N. DICKERS and W. E. SICKLES, under a contract with Secretary TOUCEY in 1858. One was the patentee of an alleged improvement in engines; and the other a lawyer, with intimate relations with Messrs. MALLORY and YULEE, of the Senate Naval Committee; and the plan was tried in opposition to the opinions of the Engineers of the Navy. Owing to numerous blunders, the machinery was two years and nine months in preparation. Its cost was $328,460. She was with difficulty got to New-Orleans, and was there reported useless until her machinery was replaced.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT JUDGE OF CALIFORNIA.

At the unanimous request of the California Congressional Delegation, Hon. STEPHEN J. FIELD, now Chief Justice of California, has been appointed United States Circuit Judge for that State, vice Judge MCALLISTER, resigned.

THE PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

The Chair presented a communication from the Secretary of the Navy in response to a resolution of the Senate, transmitting reports of the relative condition of the steamers Ossipee and Pensacola.

The Chair also presented resolutions from the Legislature of Kansas against any division of the country and in regard to public lands.

Mr. HARRIS, of New-York, (Rep.) presented a joint resolution from the Legislature of New-York relative to Allotment Commissioners.

Mr. WILMOT, of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) presented a memorial from the Inspectors of the Custom-house of Philadelphia, asking for an increase of compensation.

Mr. WHALEY, of Virginia, (Union,) presented a resolution from the Constitutional Convention of West Virginia, accepting the Constitution as amended by Congress, and also resolutions asking for an appropriation in compensation for the emancipation of slaves in West Virginia.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, (Rep.,) from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill relative to the inspection of steamboats.

Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Rep.) reported the resolution relative to the payment of foreign postage in coin, and offered a substitute authorizing the Postmaster-General to take such measures as he may deem necessary to provide for the payment in coin of the balances against the United States.

The substitute was adopted and the resolution passed.

Mr. NESMITH, of Oregon, (Dem.,) offered a resolution, which was adopted, requesting the Surgeon-General to submit to the Senate, as soon as the same can be in readiness, the materials proposed by him relating to the medical and surgical history of the rebellion, and such other medical statistics as may be in preparation in his office.

Mr. McDOUGAL, of California, (Dem.,) called up the bill to amend the Pacific Railroad Act.

Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas, (Rep.,) offered an amendment providing that the men employed to construct the road be enlisted in military organization, and be controlled by the Company under military law.

Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, (Rep.,) thought this a very extraordinary amendment, to place these men under military law.

Mr. POMEROY replied that it was the only way the work could be controlled, they being far beyond civil and civil jurisdiction.

After further discussion the bill was postponed.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) introduced a bill to prevent the circulation in the United States of any bill, note or other obligation of Confederate States. Referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LATHAM, of California, (Dem.,) introduced a bill to establish a branch mint in Nevada. Referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LANE, of Kansas, (Rep.,) introduced a bill granting lands to Kansas, in indemnity for citizens for their losses.

The bill for the admission of Sale prisoner was taken up.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER said the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. WILSON) in his military speech, charged that the bullets fired against the Union soldiers were fired by Democrats, and that the whole Democratic party of the country were disloyal.

Mr. WILSON stated that he never said that the men of that party were disloyal.

Mr. RICHARDSON, of Illinois, (Dem.,) asked who gave Virginia out of the Union? The men who were expelled from the Democratic party, while the Democratic portion of the State remained loyal and have set out for a new State. The charge was wholly unjustifiable as against the Democratic party. If there was any disloyalty he should expect to find it in the State of Massachusetts under the teachings of WINTHROP, PHILLIPS, EVERETT, GARRISON and others. In Massachusetts negroes were enlisted to defend the forts. According to the New-York Times, negroes were enlisted at Fortress Monroe and recruited in Massachusetts. When Indiana and other States did not fill up their quotas the deficit had to be made up, but Massachusetts was allowed to fill her quota by enlisting negroes to defend her forts, and yet the Senator from Massachusetts (WILSON) endeavors to have the Senate set the patriotic Democrats down as a disloyal party. He (RICHARDSON) contended that if the Administration had pursued the proper policy, this rebellion could not have lasted ninety days, but since the inauguration of the Confiscation and Emancipation measures, that we had had no success. But let the Confiscation and Emancipation acts be recalled, and there was time to save the country yet. Under the old policy success was certain; under this new policy destruction was just as certain. By the Constitution the liberty was destroyed and not by the bill. It was proposed to destroy the power of all the Courts. He did not know what else the people had in surrender of their rights. It never had been held by anybody that the President had power to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, and arrest peaceful citizens. He was opposed to both the Conscription bill and the present bill. The Conscription bill would give the country 80,000 men until 1864, and they were wanted in 1863. He saw no reason for parting with the liberties and rights of the people, if no benefit was to be gained by the country.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) said the Senator from Illinois objected to his assertion that every bullet fired against the Union was fired by a Democrat. But he (Mr. WILSON) believed that it was true. The Senator asked who carried Virginia out of the Union. It was MASON and HUNTER, LAMAR and WISE, and the delegation in Congress, except Gen. WILLSON, voted for it.

Mr. WHALEY, of Virginia, (Union,) said the Senator should except the Hon. SHERARD CLEMENS.

Mr. WILSON accepted the correction, but these men, TOOMBS, CLEMENS, and others, had to go into the Democratic party before they became traitors. No man could be found opposing the war who was not a Democrat; and such journals as the Cincinnati Inquirer, Chicago Times, and New-York World and Express, were quoted and applauded the traitors in Congress. He had no sympathy with any section of those Democrats who were fighting for their country or working for its welfare anywhere. He had no lectures to read them. The Senator referred reproachfully to the State of Massachusetts.

Mr. RICHARDSON, of Illinois, (Dem.,) disclaimed any such idea. He intended no reproach on Massachusetts. He only referred to the action of the Governor and the Secretary of War.

Mr. WILSON said, in regard to the enlistment of negroes for fears, that a few negroes were enlisted to take the place of the men who hurried off to Washington when the report came that BANKS was driven from the Valley of the Shenandoah. Massachusetts had sent 80,000 men to the war, and was not short (of all the calls made upon her) over 1,000 men. He believed that no State with the same proportion of males had sent more men to the war.

Mr. RICHARDSON said the Senator had referred to a newspaper in his State. The editor of that paper was a brother to a man in the Senate, when she saved the country last year. As many men had gone to the war from that office as from any office in the country. He would not indorse all the opinions of that paper. But the Senator was greatly mistaken if he supposed that there was in the head of that paper any thought of disloyalty. He defied the Senator to find anything disloyal in any article in that paper. And any treason in any article in that paper or in the others referred to, the Courts were open, and there was the place to try them.

Mr. CHANDLER, of Michigan, (Rep.,) said that one of the proprietors of that paper was known to be a rebel sympathizer, and believed to be disloyal.

Mr. RICHARDSON—Who believes it?

Mr. CHANDLER—Every loyal man in Michigan.

Mr. RICHARDSON said it was strange that the paper had such a circulation in Michigan. He did not believe that there was any rebel sympathizer in Illinois. In regard to the New-York Express, he said he knew one of its editors, and he knew no man more anxious to restore this country and put down rebellion.

Mr. POWELL, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) said the Senator from Massachusetts had made general charges against the Kentucky Democracy. He seemed to think that all were treasonable who did not follow him in his wild abolition crusade. He (Mr. POWELL) was willing to meet the Senator as to the truth of the charges against the President made in that address of the true men of Kentucky. If he would meet the arguments and statements, he (Mr. POWELL) would meet him. Until then, the Senator had better cease making general assertions.

Mr. WILSON, of Massachusetts, said the Senator here to-day talked of abolition. He remembered when BRANDEGEE was about to open his guns on the brave garrison in Fort Sumter, he told his followers he was willing to support the Government and the glorious old flag, "Abolitionists," and the Senator demonstrated on this floor that he was an obedient follower of BRANDEGEE in that respect. The Senator from Kentucky objected to having his Kentucky associates branded as traitors and sympathizers with treason. We were all plunged into a causeless war, and say pretense that there was a cause, was more wicked and damning than the war itself. He had no doubt but that the loyal people of this country were responsible for this war, were making a charge more wicked, false and damning, than all the murderous blows struck at the bosoms of our brave soldiers in the field. The chiefs of the rebellion disdainfully told the Senator from Kentucky, and all other men, that they would make no compromise or peace, except on the recognition of their independence; and JEFF. DAVIS told his deluded followers that he had rather have a Union with hyenas than with Yankees. He had hoped the country was not of any compromise with these men. And yet, with all these evidences, these Kentucky Democrats arraign the President of the United States as a tyrant and usurper; and one of their charges was that he had allowed his armies to overrun Kentucky; and because they had taken a little corn and hay, the Senator from Kentucky came into the Senate, and indorsed this arraignment. Shame on the men who made such an arraignment; and shame on the informers of these men who call themselves Democrats of Kentucky! Instead of their Senator? There was no need of instructing him to oppose this war. The men who draw that address were traitors, and would be. Traitors in arms were not cowards. And these men proposed to send Commissioners to JEFF. DAVIS to make an ignominious peace; and yet the Senator from Kentucky did not like to have them called by their right names—cowardly traitors against this Republic. He (Mr. WILSON) rose to call things by their right names. And if ever Brownlow Amnesty was a traitor, the Kentucky Democrats were traitors.

Mr. COLLAMER, of Vermont, (Rep.,) from the Committee of Conference on the Legislative Appropriation bill, made their report. The mileage clause is stricken out of the bill leaving mileage the same as heretofore.

The report was agreed to, so the bill passed.

Mr. HARRIS of New-York, (Rep.,) introduced a bill to facilitate the taking of depositions to be used in other countries.

Mr. THOMPSON, of Illinois, (Rep.,) did not propose to enter into this discussion, but wished to meet a few objections made against the bill by those who day after day made partisan speeches and pretend to be peculiar guardians of the Constitution. He denied the infallibility of any man as a judge of the Constitution, and claimed no infallibility for himself. He would vote for no bill which he deemed unconstitutional. The Senator from Kentucky objects to the power of arrest for political offences. He was willing to strike out the words political offences. In regard to the objection that Congress would not delegate the power to the President to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, he referred to the various powers already delegated to the President. The Constitution said that Congress shall have power to authorize letters-of-marque. Yet only the other day a bill was passed, delegating that power to the President; and the Senator from Kentucky, he believed, voted for it. The Government could not be carried on an hour, if these powers were not delegated. Again, it was objected that this writ should never be suspended, where the Courts were open. But what would be the use of such a suspension in any place where the laws could not be executed. The Constitution certainly could, not have been meant to apply to any such state of things.

Mr. CARLILE opposed the passage of the bill, arguing that it was a bill authorizing the President to make arbitrary arrests, and to take away all power from the Judicial Department of the Government, and transfer it to another Department, consisting of one man.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Rep.,) argued that the power to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus belonged to the President under the Constitution of God, and he denounced the action of Congress in passing an act which would deny this elevating the Executive of this power, and which might be taken as a precedent. He quoted at some length from the opinion of Attorney-General BATES on this point.

Mr. POWELL said he was astonished that the Senator from Massachusetts should object to being called an Abolitionist. The Senator from Massachusetts assumes the Democracy of Kentucky as traitors because they have not followed him in his crusade against the Southern States in?—Why, did not the Senator denounce his Democrat Governor, who was at first for putting the Southern States in? That was one of the most sensitive things GARRISON ever said. But GARRISON was an Abolitionist, and the Senator only denounced Democrats. The Democracy of Kentucky would not feel aggrieved at the remarks of the Senator. If he had profiled them, they might examine with the Pharisee let:—Oh, Lord! What evil have I done, that wicked man do praise me? The Democracy would be proud of such a New-England Senator. He (Mr. POWELL) would disdain to be called a man who would disdain political infamy. He pointed the calumniator against the Democracy of Kentucky. The Senator referred to the thefts of the Buchanan Cabinet. But he could tell the Senator that where the Buchanan Administration had stolen one dollar, this Administration had stolen thousands.

At 4½ o'clock the Senate took a recess until 7.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. GARRETT called up the joint resolution, allowing the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company to construct lines in the District of Columbia.

On motion of Mr. KING, the resolution was amended so as to make it general, applying to any telegraph line, and the resolution passed.

The Senate then resumed consideration of the bill for the discharge of State prisoners.

Mr. POWELL continued his remarks, arguing that the power of suspending the writ of habeas corpus was vested in Congress, and not in the President, and ought not be delegated if it could be; and under any circumstances the President had no power to make arbitrary arrests.

Mr. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, (Rep.,) said it was understood that the persons arrested could have been released on taking the oath of allegiance.

Mr. POWELL said it might be so understood, but it was not the fact.

Mr. DOOLITTLE said he thought that he was authorized to say that in relation to any arrest which had been made, except in a few cases where there had been actual conflicts of arms, the prisoners had always been open to those who were willing to take the oath of allegiance, unless where proof was positive. He referred to the arrest of a rebel detective at a hotel in New-York. He was not arrested by warrant of law. And yet the Senator from Kentucky claimed that no person should be arrested without warrant.

Mr. POWELL claimed that he had never complained of the arrest of the persons engaged with the army.

Mr. DOOLITTLE—Suppose he was not in arms? A man was not in arms. Suppose he had furnished food or clothing?

Mr. POWELL—Then I suppose he might be considered as engaged with the army.

Mr. DOOLITTLE argued that in time of war it was absolutely necessary to arrest men without the usual warrant of law. Such had always been the practice of the nations in time of war. He claimed that it was for the President to judge when the public safety required the suspension of the law for the purpose of a sudden danger and emergency he certainly would not be expected to wait for Congress to meet and judge of the requirements of public safety. He quoted at length from the decisions of the Supreme Court in support of his argument. He claimed that it was necessary in time of war to arrest persons to prevent them committing crime. It was not always possible to wait until the actual crime was committed.

Mr. CLARK, of New-Hampshire, (Rep.,) said he was pleased to hear the Senator from Illinois (Mr. THOMPSON) say to-day that this rebellion was causeless.

Mr. RICHARDSON said he was willing to repeat it. At the beginning the rebellion was causeless.

Mr. CLARK said then the President was bound to put the rebellion down; and it was the duty of every good citizen to help him put the rebellion down.

Mr. RICHARDSON said he had always held that he meant to stand by the Constitution. He did not justify departures from the Constitution by the Senator's party or anybody else.

Mr. CLARK was glad the Senator thought this a causeless rebellion; for he understood that the Senator was going to New-Hampshire to speak; and he wanted him to tell the Democrats there that this was a causeless rebellion. They had been discussing the question there; and he wanted the Senator to tell the Democrates of New-Hampshire that the Republicans did not cause this war.

Mr. RICHARDSON—I will tell them that the Senator and his party could have avoided war by compromise.

Mr. CLARK—The question is whether the rebellion had a cause—not whether we could have prevented it by going on our knees. He contended that the President must take measures to preserve the Constitution, and if he failed in his duty the safety of the country imperilled, he must take measures to preserve it. The Senators from Delaware and Kentucky seemed very much exercised about arrests. But they had no sympathy for the men who were arrested at the South and put in prisons. The Senator from Kentucky was exercised at the breaking up of the Convention in Kentucky. But only a year ago the Governor of that State and others attempted to take the State out of the Union, in defiance of all law; and his constituents commended made of that. He did not believe that the mass of the Democrats were disloyal, though some of their leaders had acted too much as though they were. Those persons who acted in that way could not complain if they were suspected to be in sympathy with the rebellion. He appealed to those Senators who professed to be loyal, to come out and help put down the rebellion.

Mr. HARLAN said he found he did not belong to either party here, and he and the Senator from Virginia (WILLEY) had formed a party of two. But he thought if the North could not agree any better than they did now, the sooner they stopped the war the better. Party spirit seemed as rampant as ever, and he was sorry to see that spirit, which could only lead to divisions. The Senator from Kentucky said he was for peace. He (Mr. HARLAN) too wanted peace. But how would he obtain it? Would he withdraw the army of the Government from Kentucky obtain it? Would he withdraw the army and let the rebels advance on the capital, or would he fight it out? In times like these the Government must be supported, and it was dangerous to make war upon the Administration and draw nice distinctions between the Executive and the Government. In times such as these, when the life of the nation was at stake, entire unity of action was necessary; and in this the rebels had the advantage. There were measures which he had not voted for. But yet he felt it his duty to give an honest support to the Government. He would not go home and oppose the Government and create a disloyal feeling in his State. There must be unity of action. And he warned the Senator against making loyalty and disloyalty a party line and denouncing all Democrats as disloyal. He believed that if the army went forward and put down the rebellion, Slavery was doomed; no matter whether any Emancipation or other act was ever passed. Nothing could save Slavery, unless it was the Democratic party of the North. There were men at the North who discouraged enlistments, because they said this was an Abolition war. All this was wrong. Every man should come up to support the Government; and there should at least be a better feeling in the Senate. He said the rebels could not be starved out. They were brave, and would fight to the last; and either their must conquer or we must conquer. There was no such thing as compromise or reconciliation with them. We must, therefore, lay aside minor differences and address ourselves to the great undertaking before us. The Border States had been nearly ruined by the war. Missouri had been nearly destroyed; and if Maryland should welcome the rebels to her soil she would be ground to powder. There could be no peace unless the Mississippi River was opened. If a peace was patched up now it would only be temporary. He looked forward to a restoration of the whole Union; and although the stars might now be dimmed, he believed that some kind angel, with pencil dipped in heavenly light, would repaint them in all their beauty and loveliness once more.

(The Senate is still in session as we go to press.)

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

The Speaker laid before the House the resolutions of the Legislature of Kansas, approving the policy of the Administration in the suppression of the rebellion.

The House passed the Senate bill providing for the holding of a Circuit Court of one district by the Judge of another, in cases of necessity, and conferring on the United States District Courts cognizance of cases of admiralty as to the lakes—the same as is now possessed by them as to the high seas.

Mr. FLANDERS, the member from the First Congressional District of Louisiana, appeared, and was qualified.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) from the Committee on Elections, made an unfavorable report on the credentials of C. L. GRAYSON, as a member from the Eighth District of Virginia.

Mr. DAWES called up the adverse report in the case of JEREMIAH PEGGETT, claiming a seat from the Second District of North Carolina. It was read. It set forth that PEGGETT was not, in any just sense, the choice of the loyal voters, not half of whom had an opportunity to vote. Besides, he was not a resident of North Carolina, although a native thereof. He had lived in Washington with his wife and family, and had been employed in Montreal, Canada.

Mr. PEGGETT, of North Carolina, (Union,) maintained that he was the choice of the loyal voters. If he had any doubts as to his eligibility, he would not be standing here to-day claiming this seat. He was appointed Secretary to Gen. BURNSIDE in Autumn, 1861, and returned to his native State for the purpose of uniting his brethren with North Carolina.

Messrs. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, (Union,) and GRAHAM, of Virginia, (Union,) examined PEGGETT'S claim. The latter said Congress House Resolution protested the seat. Two Green had been in the general House, claiming adjustment; and now with a query of only 156 voters. He says PEGGETT is not elected. This Forum was the same who last year wrote letters to the Richmond Press, speaking of great meetings held in North Carolina, addressed by him, when it was known that Graham had not been there. He had passed his declaration on Jackson's soil.

Mr. DAWES, of Massachusetts, (Rep.,) said it was true that grave charges had been made against PEGGETT, and equally grave ones against PEGGETT. But the Committee threw those aside. They were convinced by the testimony which they believed correct, that whether the statement received a preponderating majority of all the loyal voters. Votes were cast in two or three counties, the remainder being in the hands of the rebels, who held the territory in terrorem. He argued that PEGGETT was not a citizen of North Carolina, in a constitutional sense, so as to entitle him to be returned as a Representative to Congress.

The report of the Committee against PEGGETT was adopted.

The Naval Appropriation bill was taken up.

The House concurred in the Senate's amendment legalizing the temporary appointments of Assistant Paymasters and Engineers, until the return of the vessels on which they are employed or the suppression of the rebellion.

The House also concurred in the amendment computing the pay of gunners, carpenters and sailmakers from the time they entered the service, instead of from the date of their warrants.

The other and more important Senate amendments to the Naval Appropriation bill were not concurred in, and the subject will, therefore be returned to that body.

The House resumed the consideration of the Senate bill, enrolling and calling out the national forces, and for other purposes.

Mr. COX, of New-York, (Rep.,) was unwilling, at this late day of the session, to hazard the passage of this bill by opening it to amendments and discussion. It went to the Senate. It had been carefully considered by the Military Committee, who felt the strong necessity of its becoming a law. The time had come, however it might be regretted, when the Government should arm itself, by every means in its power, to put down the rebellion. In order to afford an opportunity for a limited discussion, he moves to recommit the bill to the Military Committee.

Mr. WHITTLEY, of Kentucky, (Dem.,) moved to instruct the Committee to amend the bill, so that it shall be the duty of a commander of troops at any post, on the days of election for National or state elections, to remove and keep the troops one mile from the polls during the holding of said elections.

Mr. COX, of Ohio, (Dem.,) moved to amend by adding the proviso, that none shall be enrolled under this bill except able-bodied white citizens of the United States.

Mr. BANKS of Pennsylvania, (Union) expressed himself in favor of an organization of the national forces. But there were several unfortunate features in this bill which he wished remedied by amendments. The hasty bill and this taken in connection, changed the whole system of our Government. Instead of a constitutional form of government, there would be a system not materially differing from the despotism of France and Russia. The particular bill now pending formed the nucleus for a regular army. He opposed the bill, and he was with President-Lincoln, without qualification as their authority such as to protect citizens from abuses, of which there were so many unenrolled examples. The arbitrary power exercised under the President's Proclamations had done more to defeat the Republican party than anything else. These arbitrary and unjustifiable arrests were calculated to fight up and inaugurate revolution.

Mr. DAVIS, of Kentucky, (Union,) asked his colleague to propose this amendment to the House by the Republicans, or by the party of which the gentleman was a member?

Mr. BANKS replied—By an outraged people, without regard to party. The spirit which animated JOHN HAMPDEN was not extinct. The most significant sign of the times was the Message of the Republican Governor of Pennsylvania, with regard to arrests. He specially called attention to what he called cogent constitutions of the Constitution, which secured citizens in their persons and rights. He designated the following amendments, which he wished to offer:

Provided, That nothing in this act shall authorize the arrest or trial by military authority of any person not in the service of the United States, nor drafted for the same under the provisions of this act; nor shall the act of Provost-Marshals, or any other officer of the United States, interfere with the lawful exercise of the elective franchise of any State or Territory where the execution of the laws of the United States is not obstructed by the force of arms.

Mr. BANKS merely wished to affirm a proposition, which, if two years ago anybody had denied, he would have been obnoxious to the charge of insanity.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Pennsylvania, (Rep.,) congratulated the country and Senate that the bill, which placed the whole power of the country in the hands of the President, for the purpose of crushing the unholy rebellion, had passed that body without a division, or any one voting in the negative against it. He viewed this as the evidence of a patriotic reaction in the Senate. When prominent politicians cut off sympathy with the rebels, and came to the support of the Administration, he wanted others to take the same course, lest in the end they might cover themselves with enormity, but cause no confusion to the country. He congratulated the President, and those acting with him, that they had guaranteed treason until the danger was over. No longer can the loyal North and wealth had complained of the so-called arbitrary arrests; none but the traitors complained of them. It was to save the nation and support the Constitution and laws in their hour of deadly peril that these arrests were made. They were made for wise ends. We had heretofore been too lenient. So far from condemning these arrests, it was better to read the hand-writing on the wall and make peace with liberty while there was opportunity. He reached that the power of the Government was its leniency. If there had been given to the military the cranbeed Court-martial, and to traitors hence, it would have been more pleasing to loyal men. He hoped there would be no efforts to defeat this bill by ceaseless amendments. Every able-bodied man should be given to the country to put down the accursed rebellion. He explained the position of the Governor of Pennsylvania, as his colleague (Mr. BANKS) might infer that functionary. As to the ninth resolution, alluded to by his colleague, he said, if the intention was to inaugurate one, it should be done at once; if by the conspirators at the North, the quicker the better. Our soldiers in the field would take care of the rebels of the South, and our loyal men at the North would take care of the rebels in that section. He would fight by land or sea for a thousand years against the rebels, and all of their allies at home and abroad. (Applause in the galleries, which the Speaker promptly suppressed.)

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Pennsylvania, (Union,) said, that there was vitality enough to save the Government was beyond dispute. He did not believe that traitors at the North or South could destroy it. He would devote every drop of blood—every cent of treasure—to put down the rebellion. He opposed to the gentleman and to drive his into a position of opposition to the bill, but to commend to proper consideration. He asked to collect constitutional authority, whether it is not competent to arrest, under circumstances, and to detention, when war or war not treason or loyalty. He desired to secure citizens in their constitutional rights.

At 4½ o'clock the House took a recess until 7.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. SPRAGUE, of Rhode-Island, (Union,) said no doubt that some arrests had been unwisely and unlawfully made, but at the same time, he believed there were many in the rebel army who ought to have been arrested while they were here plotting treason. The President, at that time, however, did not display the energy becoming the Executive of the great nation. This bill needed all the moral power they could give it, and in order to command it to the favor of all the people, he would be glad if it could be amended in several particulars. They should support the Administration and strengthen its hands in the suppression of the rebellion. Gentlemen talked of illegal arrests, but these were trifles compared with the wrongs inflicted by the rebels on the loyal people of the North. There was nothing to discourage us. He hoped that soon Charleston, Savannah and Vicksburgh would be in our possession. He desired to give Great Britain a hint. If Nassau shall continue to violate our laws, and foster a nest of pirates there, England would not complain if Nassau shall share the same fate as the Barbary Powers, under similar circumstances.

Mr. WRIGHT wanted the bill to go to the Committee on Military Affairs to be amended in several particulars, so as to prevent divisions in the North. He, too, wished the clergy exempted. They were the last class to be called from their sacred calling to the drudgery of the field.

Mr. WHITE, of Ohio, (Dem.,) opposed the bill for the reason that every citizen would be placed under the control of the President, and at his absolute pleasure be disposed of as he might desire. Besides, it was opposed to the letter, spirit and intent of the Constitution. If the devil himself had been called upon, he could not have devised a scheme more calculated to destroy the happiness of the people, and distract the country, in the best statement in the history of the past eighteen months. This bill was proposed to put the people of the last refuge of liberty. If these outrages shall be carried to the extent designed, an appeal will be made to the god of battle and justice.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, of Ohio, (Dem.,) followed Mr. OLIN and delivered an address of opening this debate, in contrast with the remarks of Mr. CAMPBELL, which were characterized by bitterness and severity. If the latter imagined any one on his (VALLANDIGHAM'S) side would be deterred by threats from expressing his opinion in giving his vote, he entirely misunderstood the spirit of those on that side of the hall. I hurl back the threat in defiance in the gentleman's teeth. I spurn it. I cast upon it. It is not the argument to be addressed to equals here. It is personal insolence, aimed against loyal men who sit with him here, strong in the consciousness of a common Union of the States, and only differ as to the mode of preserving it. I hope that these denunciations will be ceased.

Mr. CAMPBELL—I simply stated the fact, that the gentleman applied my remarks as personal to himself and his colleague. (WILLIAMS.) I was denouncing traitors, and will denounce them while I have a place in this floor. It is my duty and my privilege. If the gentleman applied my remarks a personal application, I cannot help it.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM—I yielded the floor in the spirit of a gentleman, and not to a blackguard. (Excitement everywhere.)

Mr. CAMPBELL—The gentleman himself is a blackguard. (Applause in the galleries.)

Mr. ROSECRANS of Illinois, (Dem.,)—We have been insulted again by contractors and plunderers of the Government. I demand that the galleries be cleared.

Mr. COX—I hope not. There are only a small number of them, and the doorkeepers have been keep them in order.

Mr. ROSECRANS—I insist upon the galleries being cleared.

The Speaker appealed to the gentlemen on the floor themselves to preserve order.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM thought the issue would be admitted by the galleries that this is a legislative and deliberative assembly, and that it is not becoming to express any approval or disapproval of whatever takes place upon the floor.

The Speaker made a few appropriate remarks, and appealed to the galleries to observe the propriety of the House.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, resuming, said that Mr. CAMPBELL had called attention to what some gentlemen in New-York had recently done, but if they were to learn lessons they were not to go to that quarter; for the same New-York gentlemen, three morning ago, if he mistook not, said he was for marching to Richmond, and when that scene he would let the "wayward sisters depart." He did not propose to detain the several merits of the bill on this floor. He proposed to discuss it before the country, and to discuss the question of constitutionality and the unwise and injudicious exercise of powers not warranted by the provisions of the Constitution. They had appealed to the people since the 4th

AFFAIRS AT CHARLESTON.

We have received our files of Richmond papers to Feb. 20. They furnish us the following extracts:

SPIRIT OF THE RICHMOND PRESS.

"A GREAT GAME."

From the Richmond Enquirer, Feb. 20.

There is something exceedingly unusual in the diplomatic proceedings and official notes which we have lately published, and which have passed between the Ministers of France and the United States. In the first place, Count Mercier, the French Minister, has been given the cut direct by the Secretary of State at Washington. M. Mercier had responded, for the information of his own Government, that he had proposed, to Richmond, to commence negotiations on a suggestion given by Mr. Seward to him in a private conversation. The French Government publishes the letter of Mercier, amongst other documents connected with American affairs; and thereupon Mr. Seward, finding himself compromised by the revelation that he had, at the period of M. Mercier's visit, actually betrayed some anxiety to know the mind of our Government, flatly, and with an insulting brutality, denies the whole story. He does not explain away nor twist the matter, he does not even simply state Count Mercier has told a lie. Next we have the letter from M. Dayton and Lyons, proposing that the Federal Government should enter into "informal conferences" with the Confederates; and the audacious reply of Seward, false and insolent from beginning to end, is published immediately in New-York before it is communicated to the French Government, through Mr. Dayton. This is unusual, and seems to indicate a deliberate intention, on the part of one Government or the other, or of both, to bring to an end their diplomatic relations. There is a deep game in it. Seward is a cunning player; but Louis Napoleon, also, is no novice, and the result will worth watching, even by uninterested spectators, still more by us, who perhaps have a certain stake.

As to the question of veracity, between Mr. Seward and any other gentleman whatsoever as to what passed in private conversation, all mankind, we presume, will record its belief in the other gentleman. Mr. Seward himself would, very evidently have a very mean opinion of the intellect of any one who should believe his story. He never speaks and never writes to be believed, but utters the thing that it is necessary that people should pretend to believe for the time being. He knows well that every human being believes Mercier; but he is American Secretary of State, and has a policy, and his policy needs that certain positions should be assumed and certain words written and spoken which he expects his countrymen to make believe that they believe. And they do so; and respect their Secretary the more that he knows what to say. If they could think him guilty of telling the simple truth they would lose their confidence in him as a smart man. M. Mercier, therefore, will be believed, while he is hooted out of the country as a liar. He can never again hold official intercourse, or any other intercourse save with the smart Secretary, and has probably by this time demanded his passports.

"Yankee" is a Yankee. None knows this better than Mr. Seward. He intends to be United States minister between France and England, and the profound hollowness of their entente cordiale. He knows that upon this American question, as on every other, the two Powers are watching each other with unceasing vigilance—each in hope that the other will make one rash step. And he knows that the French expedition to Mexico is looked upon in England with as much jealousy as in the United States. And he hopes, by taunting and goading France in speedy recognition of the Confederacy, to detach England—to give England the chance he knows she is seeking—to differ her the Yankee alliance; then, to suddenly annihilate the French fleet in the Gulf; crush France out of Mexico, and the Confederates out of these States, and then divide the spoil—an imperial spoil indeed—the whole continent, from the Isthmus to Hudson's Bay!

Perhaps, we say, such is the game on the board, and such are the moves, and such the stakes. For ourselves, we play a simple game. We stand on our own soil, defending our own homes, and resolute to maintain our sovereignty and our freedom. Let France, England and Yankedom turn and wind one another as they will, we know that while we can keep our glorious army on foot, we, at least, are safe.

THE CONSCRIPTION LAW.

From the Richmond Whig, Feb. 20.

The Yankee Congress is employing diligently, the few remaining days in organizing and consolidating a despotism as pure and unmixed as that of Russia. Bills are now pending, and likely to become laws, to vest in the Executive the absolute control of the militia of the States, and to crush the State banks and vest the whole money power of the country in the Executive Department. Either, if submitted to by the people, will convert them into serfs, and render the Federal chief an irresponsible autocrat. The military bill empowers him to draft all the militia for three years, and to be commanded in service and instructed in martial law, from the moment of drafting. The money bill subjects the banks to a tax under which they cannot live, and makes the money which the President may issue the sole medium of exchange and standard of value.

The Disaffected parties are already taking the alarm at this stupendous despotism. VALLANDIGHAM, in a recent speech at Newark, N. J., asked: "Will you send out your sons to the battle field? (Overwhelming cries: 'No, never.') Shall they be conscripted under this act for two years more, and for the war? (No, never.')

On the enforcement of this law will come the practical issue. That will test the sincerity of those Northern men who profess abhorrence of the war, and the objects for which it is waged. We have not much faith in one of the Eastern Yankees, notwithstanding the welcome "No, never," of New-Jersey. Yet we hope for better hopes of the Northwest. There are Yankees there too, no doubt, and as mean as any in Boston or Newburyport. But the majority of the people seem cast in a superior mold of humanity. They derive their descent from Southern ancestors; they have not yet been long enough associated with Northern mudsills to degenerate from Government, and we will not despair of their showing themselves fit for something better than to be the serfs of a Yankee tyranny.

THE REBELS AND THE NORTHWEST.

The Richmond Enquirer discusses the proposal made by the French Emperor through M. DROUYN DE LHUYS and Mr. SEWARD's response, and says:

"But suppose they should yield to the supposed consent of the Emperor, and propose an armistice for six months, on the terms that they are in the meantime to occupy the ground now within their lines upon our soil—covering the greater part of Tennessee, growing out of Virginia, embracing Winchester, crossing Louisiana, threatening Mobile, and lying in ambush in Fort Pickens and Fort Jackson. Mobile—then would arise the question, what should we gain by this? It is not intended here to prejudge that question; its decision will rest with the proper authorities; but it is as well to understand that if there is to be any armistice at all, this is the time in the part of one our Government will have to accept. They will have to consider how our army is to be kept together and paid during six months of armistice, while the enemy's flag flies over our country, and his guns are pointed up all our rivers. At the moment when we have every reason to believe that the invading Yankee States are becoming exhausted, divided, haunted by the terror of immediate anarchy, disruption and bankruptcy, shall we give them six months' breathing time to recover their present basis of operations, and to gather their strength for a new campaign? Time, it may be said, is a gain to us. Yes, as long as the enemy carries on the war, and makes no progress in proportion to his efforts. Every day lost by an invading army in fruitless marches and baffled assaults is so far gained for us, who are on the defensive. But, during the proposed six months of armistice, it is to be feared that they could gain more than we should. Kentucky, Missouri, Maryland, and parts of Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana would be wholly within their power; the corruption, intrigue and violence would have full scope to work. They would be running against us—not against one.

However, it may be suggested that France may meant something more than a mere armistice for negotiation; that she has some specific basis of settlement to propose and to urge upon both belligerents. It is possible. In that case, France would offer to bargain with us for European recognition of our independence, on the terms of giving up certain portions of the States forming the Confederacy, and making some alterations of engagements concerning our domestic institutions, which might constitute the casting and mutual by public opinion of Europe. Neither one nor the other of these things has our Government a right to do. No proposal of such a kind has it the right to entertain. The negotiation would necessarily break down, and at the end of the month of fighting which would begin again, if the Yankees still had cannon for us to pray, we would be in a worse condition than we are now.

We all [illegible] to know, that some of our statesmen [illegible] this way [illegible] Gov. [illegible] they have authority, either to treat with the Confederacy, if agreeable. This is a wholesome state of feeling, and must produce its fruits of disorganization and discouragement in the Northwestern troops. But let us not mistake the matter. Not one of those States has yet pronounced itself in this sense, though some stump orators have. When they do take [illegible] and Governors accredit Commissioners to Richmond for any such purpose, all doubt will be resolved and answered according to the nature of their proposals. We presume they will be told that the fighting they have to do is to call back the seceders to their own country, that then we will be willing to make treaties with them, but then as to the union with the Confederacy, under the old flag or any other, it is too late, far too late. The people and statesmen of Northwestern States know that slavery has been the cause of all the misery which has fallen on the country, and it is probable that Southern slavery will be the means of all the misery they have experienced, and yet they will not be willing to see the end of it. Government they have constituted, and yet they shall be harassed for the most part still and so partially, and, although we will not entirely respect the efforts to stay offer, yet we shall not be willing to trade with them—making the matter a subject of discussion and mutual accommodation, but of a proposition.

Politics, times, authorized Commissioners are dangerous, however, we take the liberty of reminding our Generals and military authorities that in any dealings of citizens come proposing about our lines, purporting to be Northwestern Commissioners, they arrest these persons and send them off to Gen. Winder. Let them look sharp after reliable gentlemen, and overhaul intelligent ladies. Otherwise, where is the use of Castle Thunder?

The moral of all this, the lesson we have to learn from all the rumors both of French mediation and of Northwestern revolution, is, that now, now more than ever, our army should be kept full, and strong and ready. Believe the military, you are our only friends. It is to you, by style of diplomacy we rely. That was a statesmanlike stroke of policy, your victory at Fredericksburgh; you wrote an able State paper at Murfreesboro, and we defy the world to produce a more official governmental thing you talked on the hills of Vicksburgh.

If Europe makes overtures of friendship—if the great Northwest comes crawling to our feet—it is because you stand there, Confederate soldiers, under your glorious battle-flag, and defy all the ends of the earth to knuff it down."

PLANT NO TOBACCO.

From the Richmond Whig, Feb. 20.

In consequence of information derived from a gentleman engaged in purveying for the army we are satisfied that there should not be a plant of tobacco grown in Virginia or North Carolina the present year. That information advises us of the amount of grain necessary to support the army, and we are convinced that that quantity cannot be produced in the area free from the inroads of the army, unless by devoting all its capacities to that end. The amount of corn alone necessary for the horses of the army of Virginia is greater than was ever produced in any single State, or two. With the largest corn-producing districts now in the occupancy of the enemy, or liable to his raids, the question is reduced to a narrow compass. The army must be supplied—our salvation depends on it—and, at the same time, a sufficiency of food must be raised for the people. To this end, the limited surface remaining to us must be appropriated exclusively to the production of food.

Before being arrested in the course of the waste of the army, we were opposed to any interference with the industrial pursuits of the people. We are not certain now that good can be effected by legislative action. But if any can be achieved, it must be, not by limiting the crop of tobacco, but by interdicting it altogether. With half a crop of tobacco, quite as much corn could be raised as with none. But with no tobacco, the crops of potatoes, peas, beans, and other vegetables could be vastly augmented. These, in case of necessity, could furnish food for those who stay at home, while the whole corn-crop might be employed for the benefit of the army.

FROM FREDERICKSBURGH.

Correspondence of the Richmond Whig.

FREDERICKSBURGH, Tuesday, Feb. 17, 1863.

We have had the luxury of all varieties of Winter, within the past week—sleet, frequent rains, and finally a heavy snow-storm, which, from the quantity on the ground early this morning, must have began at some one of the "wee sma' hours ayant the twal," and continued without intermission during the day. It is dissolving rapidly, and the already bad roads bid fair ere long to be without doubt, impassable for military purposes between Fredericksburgh and Hamilton's Crossing. From the impudence with which Hooker's pickets pace the rounds on the river bank, the storm has not contributed much to reconcile them to the Quixotic enterprise in which they are involuntarily engaged.

Yesterday, Gen. PATRICK, Provost-Marshal when this place was occupied by the Yankees last Summer, came over under flag of truce to have an interview with Gen. BARRIERE and the Mayor; but for what object has not transpired. Whilst discharging his functions in the town in the Summer, no cause of complaint was given save the presence of Yankees, and private property was scrupulously respected under his orders; but unexpected events seemed to have transformed him into the brute his personal appearance betokens; and when remonstrated with by citizens, against the wanton destruction of their property when the Yankees crossed over in December, answered that circumstances had changed, and boldly refused his interference to stop it. In the same boat came over Rev. Mr. LAPPERANTZ, Chaplain of Stuart's Cavalry, who was taken prisoner at Middleburgh. Owing to some informality which it was requisite to observe, he was compelled to return to the Stafford side to spend another day and night with the people among whom he had been in "durance vile." He was sent over to our lines late this afternoon to remain.

To-day the officer from the other side, though desirous of exchanging papers, was compelled to decline, as he said, by reason of a positive order to that effect. This seems to be one of the new leaves turned over by Gen. HOOKER since he assumed command, and which he doubtless believes an essential part of his programme to retrieve the failures of his predecessors—unless it means nothing more than a studied effort to conceal the progress of political events at the North and Northwest.

As you have already learned, a portion of the Federal army have been withdrawn from the Rappahannock, while a very considerable body, no doubt, still remain in our front, or we are much deceived in appearances. The troops remembered are evidently those reported to have recently landed on the Peninsula and Southside of the James. A trustworthy body, who arrived here yesterday, reports that a wilderness of Yankee tents may still be seen several miles up the river in the vicinity of Banks' Ford. What may be the opinion of our Commander-in-Chief regarding the enemy's movements, is unknown to correspondents. Were it otherwise, it should not appear in the printed column.

The duration of the war is here, as well as elsewhere, a fruitful theme of speculation. Both sides no doubt earnestly desire peace, and are, ere this, convinced that war, stripped of its gaudy trappings and the false glare which interest or ambition have thrown around it, is the most terrible scourge that can afflict any nation. Occasionally events reveal a gleam of hope, but a regular reading of the organs of Northern sentiment for weeks past, induces the belief that we may as well prepare for a long continuance of this conflict at least until LINCOLN's term of office stands in other shoulders. The reported dissection in the Northwest may be but the Trojan horse in one of his Protean forms.

Under date of Feb. 16, a correspondent of the Enquirer writes:

"Yesterday about fifteen Federal soldiers came down the river bank opposite the flag of truce station, and said they were tired of the war, and wanted to come over; if we would allow them to be sent back on which they commenced, they would be changed to the Federals, or if we would send a boat for them. One fellow very earnestly urged our men to come over after him. Failing in this, they asked for an exchange of papers, saying they wanted to hear the truth from their own State, which they could not get from each of their own papers as were allowed to circulate in the Army of the Potomac. This exchange being deemed irregular, was not allowed by our officers.

The Yankee officer who met the flag of truce said he was strictly prohibited from exchanging papers.

A revival of religion is progressing among the soldiers here, under the direction of Rev. Mr. Owens, Chaplain of the Seventeenth Mississippi Regiment, preaching being held as often as three times a day in the M. E. Church, (South.) Per contra, there was a ball at the Planter's House last night, and McLaw's Minstrels perform to-night; whilst a theatrical performance from the boys, is on the tapis, I hear, for Saturday night. So we go.

Gen. PATRICK said, yesterday, of flag of truce, that the burning of the Phillips House was to be the subject of a thorough investigation. It is also rumored, though not believed, that Boscobel, the farm-house of Fitzhugh & Lewis, in Stafford county, has been burned. This house is near two hundred years old, having been built in colonial times.

It is also reported that the Yankees are building a causeway to the river on the Stafford side opposite the mansion of W. F. TAYLOE, Esq., about twelve miles below here.

The Yankee pickets still walk their posts on the opposite side. If they are going away, the cry of the people here, is, 'why don't they go along.' No more troops have been seen to move from the front, though the cars seem to be in motion all night."

FROM CHARLESTON.

Gen. BEAUREGARD has issued an order calling upon the planters of South Carolina to furnish, with the utmost dispatch, 2,000 able-bodied laborers with spades and shovels.

The Charleston Mercury of Feb. 18 says:

"We have serious work before us. The enemy's assault, so long deferred, will for that reason be the more formidable. Every agency that human power and ingenuity, urged on by devilish hate, can command, will be used to capture or destroy the 'hotbed of the rebellion.' The blow that is about to fall may be the last we shall receive [illegible]

[illegible] THE REBEL CONGRESS.

[illegible] THANKS TO MAGRUDER.

In the rebel Senate, on Feb. 19, Mr. STARROW, of Louisiana, from the Military Committee, reported back, with a recommendation that it do pass, the following joint resolution from the House, which was read and unanimously adopted:

Resolved by the Congress of the Confederate States of America, That the bold, intrepid and brilliant conduct of Maj.-Gen. J. BANKHEAD MAGRUDER, Col. Tom. GRIMES, Maj. Leon SMITH, and the officers and men under their command and soldiers engaged in the action, and victory achieved over the fleet and naval forces of the enemy at Galveston, on the 1st day of January, 1863, entitle them to the thanks of Congress and the country.

2. That this brilliant achievement, resulting, under the Providence of God, in the capture of the war-steamer Harriet Lane, and the defeat and ignominious flight of the hostile fleet from the harbor; the recapture of the city and the raising of the blockade of the port of Galveston, signally evinces that superior force may be overcome by skilful conception and daring courage.

3. That the foregoing resolutions be communicated by the Secretary of War to Major-Gen. MAGRUDER, and by him to his command.

THE EXEMPTION BILL.

In the course of the discussion upon the Exemption Bill,

Mr. MAXWELL, of Florida, presented his views at some length on the subject of exempting overseers, arguing that Congress was not vested with authority to prescribe police regulations for slaves.

The amendment submitted by Mr. M. was finally rejected, and that proposed by Mr. HENRY agreed to in the following shape:

Sec. 2. For the police of slaves: one person on each plantation, being the owner thereof, or a person of unsound mind, a lame soldier, or a person absent from home in the military or naval service of the Confederacy, on which there are twenty or more slaves. Provided, the person so excepted was employed and acting as overseer previous to the 16th of April last, and there is no other white person on the plantation who is not liable to military duty, which fact shall be verified by the affidavits of said person and two respectable citizens, and shall be filed with the enrolling officer; and, provided, that the enrolling officer shall be satisfied that no white male male, not liable to military duty, can be procured by ordinary diligence, suitable for said purpose.

Mr. SIMMS, of Kentucky, moved a reconsideration of the vote by which Mr. HENRY's amendment was adopted. The motion was rejected—Yeas, 7; Nays, 15.

Mr. HAYNES submitted an amendment providing for the exemption of one person on each farm or plantation, having a family of ten white persons thereon, &c. This amendment was ordered to be printed; after which the Senate went into Executive session, and soon after adjourned.

CIVIL VS. MILITARY AUTHORITY.

From the Richmond Whig, Feb. 20.

The habeas corpus case, in which THEODORE WARRAN was the petitioner, recently argued in the Hustings Court, by Ro. OLIN, Esq., for the Court-martial, and Judge CAMPBELL for WARRAN, was decided on Monday by Judge LYONS, in favor of the petitioner. The Court held that the power to declare martial law under the Constitution and laws of the Confederacy did not belong to the President, and that Congress had no authority to confer such power upon him; that the authority to suspend the writ of habeas corpus did not carry with it the right to declare martial law; that martial law was an arbitrary and dictatorial power, which might be exercised by a Commander-in-Chief over his camp or elsewhere at his peril, and that neither the Constitution or the laws sanctioned or justified such a stretch of power; that the Congress might indemnify the Commander-in-Chief for powers thus unlawfully assumed, but the Court could not neither recognize or sanction it; that our Government was one of Constitution and laws as well in time of war as in time of peace; that the Constitution limited and defined the powers of the President and the Congress, and that no powers belonged to either which was not expressly conferred by that instrument. That Court-martial have exclusive and restricted jurisdiction over soldiers and others belonging to the army; that their proceedings are governed by law and confined entirely to those who were in the military service; and that, therefore, they had no right to try a citizen not connected with the army, who was under the Constitution entitled to trial by jury for every offence against the laws, and, therefore, the custody in which the prisoner was held was illegal, and he was ordered to be discharged; but the Court held him to bail to answer before the Grand Jury the imputed offence—selling liquor.

DISCIPLINE AMONG THE REBEL TROOPS.

A SEVERE ORDER FROM MAJ.-GEN. WHEELER.

The following circular order, which was recently issued by the rebel Maj.-Gen. WHEELER, shows that laxity of disciplins prevails elsewhere than among the National forces:

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, FRANKLIN, Jan. 22, 1863.

The disgraceful state of discipline which exists in certain portions of this command, has rendered these worse than useless appendages to the brigade. Companies muster for duty not more than one-fourth or one-fifth their strength, and even these are allowed to scatter so as to be of little or no use to the command. I attribute this state of things to culpable or illegal neglect of duty on the part of regimental and company commanders.

The gallantry displayed by many of these men, and their devotion to the cause, has so won for them the affection of their brigade commander as to make it extremely painful for him to proceed against or even censure them; but his duty to the country as well as kindness to the command, now demands more stringent action.

The disgraceful and cowardly conduct of many officers and men, who seek to avoid actions with the enemy, and other dangers and hardships, by remaining in reserve camps and other places of rest and comfort, under various pretences, has been noticed with deep regret by the true officers and soldiers of the command. Though they may claim to be true men, it is difficult for their comrades to attribute their absence from their command, when in the face of the enemy, to any other cause than cowardice. He hopes and feels, however, that there are some exceptions to this rule, but it is painful to reflect that it is true in a majority of cases.

Company commanders must at all times keep their commands together, never allowing a man to be absent from duty without written permission from his brigade commander. They must exact implicit obedience from their men; remain with them, keep them together, provide for their comfort, drill them at every opportunity, require them to keep their arms and accoutrements in order, and see that they are provided with the proper ammunition, and in readiness at all times to meet the enemy. They must also see that once the march they keep close up and in ranks. In case a soldier deserves punishment, they must immediately have the proper punishment inflicted, or prefer written charges against the delinquent.

True discipline can only be maintained by officers never overlooking a breach of duty, however slight.

Regimental commanders will be held strictly responsible that they require company officers to do all their duties, and if they do not perform all their duties, they must be arrested, and other officers found who will do their duty. Brigade commanders will hold regimental commanders strictly responsible for their compliance with their duties, and will promptly arrest and report as incompetent all field officers who fail to require their company officers to do all their duties as above prescribed.

A strict compliance with the above, and the individual and unstring exertions on the part of all officers, is necessary to preserve proper discipline in the command, and fit it for the work for which it was designed. Any officer who may be found disposed or unwillingly to preserve discipline in their commands, must give way to those who can and will accomplish these objects.

Regimental commanders must rid the command of incompetent company officers, and the brigade commanders will take care to rid this brigade of incompetent and negligent regimental commanders. By order of Maj.-Gen. WHEELER.

FROM NEWPORT NEWS.

From the Richmond Whig Feb. 20.

Authentic information has reached the city, that a portion of HOOKER's army, twenty-five to thirty thousand strong, has landed at Newport News and Suffolk. The troops at the former place, comprise the division formerly commanded by BURNSIDE. They are erecting cabins and constructing ovens, with the apparent purpose of making it their quarters for a considerable period. The supposition is, that the place will be kept as a depot for troops, with a view to prevent dissertions, and have them in readiness to send either to the South side or elsewhere as circumstances may demand.

CAPTURED ARMS.

An order just issued by Gen. LEE says:

"The privilege heretofore exercised by troops on the battle-field, of exchanging the small arms and field pieces for those captured from the enemy, is hereafter forbidden, and the prohibition will be strictly enforced by commanders. Disasters may easily result from a disregard of this necessary order. All such exchanges must be made by proper authority and with a due regard to the efficiency of the troops. Captured arms arms and artillery will be turned over to the Chief Ordnance officer, and be assigned, whenever practicable, to the troops whom the General shall, on testimony, award their capture."

BELLE BOYD.

Miss BELLE BOYD was serenaded in KNOXVILLE,

[illegible] a few evenings ago, by [illegible] and being loudly called for by the crowd, she appeared at a window and said: "Gentlemen, I am [illegible] Lieut.-Gen. LONGSTREET, I am sure, has not cannot make a speech, but he has sent you a message. He thanks you for your compliment."

REGIMENTS REDUCED.

The Winchester (Tenn.) Bulletin has reliable information by a gentleman direct from Louisville, that Regiments in Bragg's army are decreasing by hundreds.

The Contrabands at Port Royal.

IMPORTANT LETTER FROM SECRETARY CHASE.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Feb. 18, 1863.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated Jan. 19, 1863, in the following words:

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to report to the House, as far as in his power, the number employed and also the compensation of slaves in the United States; and, also, as to to what extent will expenses have been compensated for by the services of such slaves.

In response, I beg leave to submit the following statement:

Soon after the taking of Port Royal, and the occupation of the adjacent islands by the United States forces, acting under the provisions of the act of July 13, 1861, authorizing commercial intercourse with States in insurrection, and on consultation with the Quartermaster-General, I appointed Lieut. Col. WM. H. REYNOLDS, of Rhode Island Volunteers, detached for the duty as special agent for the collection of property abandoned by the rebel owners, without compensation other than his pay as Lieutenant-Colonel. Under regulations and instructions issued by me, it was made his duty to superintend the removing and collecting the products of the soil and other property found or brought within the districts occupied by our forces. These instructions and regulations were framed with a view to the protection of the rights of loyal citizens whose property should fall into the hands of the Government; to insure economy in gathering, preparing and transporting to market the cotton and other property found on the abandoned plantations, and to protect not only the interests of the United States, but the interest of all parties concerned, by procuring from sales the largest possible proceeds. Under these instructions all property was shipped to New-York, consigned to HIRAM HARVEY, the Collector of the port, who was directed to prepare and sell at public auction, after advertisement, which service was to be assigned to him, in consideration of collection, transportation and sale were to be paid from the proceeds of sales, and the balance was to be held for the benefit of whatever persons might be found entitled to the same.

The act of July 13, 1861, already referred to, authorized the President to permit commercial intercourse with any parts of the insurrect States, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury should adopt; regarding it as in the highest degree beneficial to commercial intercourse with that portion of the country, that the abandoned States should be properly cultivated. I appointed EDWARD L. PIERCE, Esq., a special agent, and made it his duty to superintend the culture of the plantations and the employment of the laborers engaged therein.

Copies of the regulations made and instructions issued are herewith transmitted. Acting under them, the special agents named performed the duties assigned them until the 15th day of June, 1862, when the whole subject of the cultivation of the soil, and the collection of property, was transferred to the control of the War Department.

In obedience to the direction of the House, I transmitted a statement of receipts and expenditures on account of the agencies referred to. By this statement it will be seen that there has been paid:

For agricultural implements, cagging, &c.	$77,081 22
For steamer Flora	31,340 31
For white labor	62,747 70
For colored labor	24,557 21
Total	$225,705 34
The receipts have been	79,094 10
Leaving on hand from this fund	$501,578 76

Against this fund, or against the Treasury, on account of the agencies referred to, there are no outstanding claims, except such as loyal owners of property sold may present and substantiate.

Among the items of expenditure will be found one for the purchase, refitting, and running of the steamer Flora. In the prosecution of their work by the special agents, a steamer of light draft and of large carrying capacity was found necessary for the purpose of conveying property from the several plantations to the transports.

Accordingly, the Flora was purchased for this purpose from the proceeds of the sales; and it is proper to add that she is reported to have rendered important service in military operations, both while under the charge of the agents of this department and since her transfer to the Department of War, and can now be sold for a very considerable advance on her cost.

For the information of the House, I transmit a detailed statement, prepared in answer to a resolution of the Senate, of the sales of cotton in New-York, the time of sale, the persons by and to whom sold, with the amount paid for commissions and storage.

No information is in my possession as to expenditures on the plantations since the transfer already mentioned to the War Department, in June last.

From this statement it will be seen that no expenditure whatever has been made from the Treasury on account of the collection of cotton, or for the preparation for sale, or for the cultivation of the plantations, or for the hire or subsistence of laborers, or for any educational or benevolent care bestowed upon them. The only qualification of this general representation required by the exact facts, is that some transportations and some rations were furnished by the War Department for agents, superintendents and laborers engaged on the plantations, which advances were partially if not wholly compensated by benefits to the military service from the use of the Flora, and from the services of agents and employes under this Department.

I embrace, with pleasure, this opportunity of rectifying false impressions, industriously propagated, that the collection of cotton and the care of plantations and laborers on the Sea Islands of South Carolina, has been attended with great cost to the Government. So far from this truth, this Government, that there is now in the hands of the Assistant Treasurer at New-York, a half million of dollars saved through these operations, which at this moment belongs more rightfully to the laborers who planted, cultivated and gathered the cotton, than to any other possible claimant.

With great respect, S. P. CHASE,

Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. GALUSHA A. GROW, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

France and the United States.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have read once and again, at first eagerly, then with deliberation, your three articles on the designs of France, and appended the one of your excellent correspondent, "A Veteran Observer," whose communications I always welcome with peculiar pleasure. All these, your own and his, denote that the enlargement and blackening of that "cloud," which, I think, I predicted once in the TIMES, the which one of your readers, a friend of mine, will well remember I have constantly pointed out as coming over us "from the Gulf of Mexico." The rumbling of its thunder may even now be heard by sagacious ears. What are we doing to make its bolts innocuous? How lies, for example, our own harbor, which has never yet been properly defended, not even at its southern approach?

But that is not the question which tempts me now to trouble you. I wish simply to remind my countrymen that, as with individuals, so with a nation, there is a reputation to be maintained, as well as the reality of manly courage and self-confidence. When M. MERCIER was allowed to go to Richmond, where, there can be little doubt, he told the rebels, directly or indirectly, to persevere, we failed to maintain our dignity, and men, who felt as I, must have been as much displeased as astonished at the latitude of an indulgence which they knew would be abused. Now, that all is revealed, what do the President and State Secretary wait for? Do they fear to precipitate a war with France, if they hand the intriguing Frenchman his passport? Be assured we shall not by any forbearance avoid it; while, by the Secretary's so doing, we should assume what, perhaps, in simple prudence, in the midst of our great difficulties, we have not maintained—a front. I mean toward foreign nations, bedding our true national grandeur, and such as the two most powerful of those nations have never hesitated to hold, and to exaggerate into a perpetuous haughtiness toward us. At least there can be no doubt that a prompt and positive demand should be made for the French Minister's recall.

In thus writing, I have reason to know that I but echo the keynote to the universal sentiment of Americans. Our look and attitude as a nation have never been correspondent (at least Europe-ward) to the loftiness of our rightful pretensions. Nations—once more—are to individual men: to win respect from their competitors, they have to show, unmistakably, that they respect themselves. L. O.

CAPTURE OF A TRAIN IN WESTERN VIRGINIA.—A train of fifteen wagons, loaded with hay and drawn by about eighty horses, was going from New Creek to Moorefield. When within about six miles of Romney the train was surprised by a squad of rebel cavalry. The train was accompanied by a squad of fifty men, who were completely surprised and captured. The rebels burned the wagons and contents and succeeded in getting away with the horses and prisoners.—Wheeling Intelligencer.

EFFECT OF HIGH PRICES FOR PAPER.—One of our largest publishing houses is about sending the stereotype plates of a bulky octavo volume to England to be printed; the cost of paper in America being so ruinously advanced, the work can be done cheaper abroad, reckoning in all the expenses of freight, duties and exchange.—Boston Journal, Feb. 19.

The Children's Aid Society.

TENTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE TREASURER.

The annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held at the DEAD.—A child of Mr. Wm. Gilchrist, of Newark, on Saturday night about 12 o'clock. A woman named Ann Brown, residing in New-street, was burned to death under very painful circumstances. Her husband and the rest of the family retired about 10 o'clock, leaving Mrs. Brown sitting up, and about midnight one of her sons was awakened by a sense of suffocation, and around his father, who, upon going down stairs, found Mrs. Brown burnt to a crisp, the lower portion of her person being in a state of charred ashes. It is not known how the poor woman took fire.

MAD DOG IN ORANGE.—On Saturday afternoon two children, one a son of Mr. Geo. Harrison, and the other a son of Mr. Calvin D. Pierson, were bitten in Main-street, Orange, by a large Newfoundland dog, in a rabid state. He also bit another dog, and was finally shot by Mr. Harrison, Jr. The number of rabid dogs which have made their appearance in Newark and vicinity this Winter is unusual.

SOLDIERS TRANSPORTED OVER THE NEW-JERSEY RAILROAD.—Since Aug. 1, 1861, 110,863 soldiers have been transported over the New-Jersey Railroad to Washington and intermediate stations, without accident.

WAGES MOVEMENT.—The journeymen masons of Newark have resolved to demand $3 per day for their labor, on and after Monday, March 2.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Sutherland, Ingraham and Clerke.

John Gardiner and others vs. Daniel Tyler.—This was an appeal by the defendant, from a judgment rendered on a trial at the Circuit, before Justice CLERKE, without a jury, on the 6th of March, 1861.

The action was on a decree rendered by the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of this State, in an admiralty cause in rem, brought by the present plaintiffs, as libelants, against the bark White Squall, on a bottomry bond, the decree being against the appellant, one of the claimants of the bark, and John J. Boyd, his surety, as bondsman, in a bond given in the admiralty cause, under the act of Congress of March 20, 1847, to procure the release of the bark from custody. The judgment on the bond was made a part of the general decree in the cause, in conformity to that act.

The defense set up by the answer were that the bond was not executed by the defendant (Tyler,) or by his autnority, and therefore that the District Court had no jurisdiction to render the judgment in question. Also, that Boyd, the other defendant in the judgment, in the District Court, had paid $5,700, and the plaintiffs had released him and thereby discharged Tyler, the present defendant, and further, that the judgment in the District Court was for the penalty of the bond, and not for the amount actually due, and that the only outstanding claim, due was interest on $15,000 10 from 6th June, 1858. The plaintiffs read in evidence an exemplification of the record from the District Court and rested. To this record the defendant objected, which objection was overruled. A motion to dismiss the complaint was also overruled.

The appeal was based upon the following points: The offer to prove that the defendant never executed the bond in question; never authorized the same to be executed; never knew of the execution thereof until the commencement of the suit in the District Court; and that he never in any manner ratified the execution of the bond—was improperly rejected by the Court. The District Court had no jurisdiction in personam of the defendant, Tyler, other than in respect to the bond alleged to have been executed by him to the Marshal under the statute of 1847. The lawful execution of that bond by Tyler, therefore, was the fact upon which the question of jurisdiction wholly depended.

The record of the judgment of the District Court was not conclusive evidence of that fact; but its verity was liable to be impeached and negatived in the same manner and to the same extent as the record of a foreign judgment. The Federal Courts of the United States are Courts of another Government, and stand to the same relation to this Court as the Courts of foreign countries. When the question of jurisdiction is in issue, the judgment of a Court of another State—and a fortiori, the judgment of a Court of another Government—is in the effect like a foreign judgment, it is prima facie evidence; but for all purposes of sustaining that issue it is examinable into to the same extent as a judgment rendered by a foreign Court. (Starbuck vs. Murray, 5 Wend., 148.)

The provision of the Constitution, (Section 1, Article 4,) has no application to judgments of the Federal Courts. It refers only to "judicial proceedings of every other State." But if it were applicable, it does not prevent an inquiry into the jurisdiction of the Court, in which the original judgment was given, to pronounce it.

Story on the Constitution, Section 1,312; Hassell vs. Bridges, 9 Moo., 492, 497; Shumway vs. Stillman, 4 Cranch, 542; Rankin vs. Hitch, 13 J. R., 141.

The other points are of author importance.

Decision reserved.

J. T. Williams and E. E. Owen for appellants.

E. Seymour and Jas. Lamoque for respondent.

United States Circuit Court....Feb. 23.

Before Judge Shipman.

The February term of this Court opened this morning. Owing to the storm, some of the jurors were absent, and the jury business was adjourned till the 27th.

SENTENCE.

Patrick Mulvihill, indicted for larceny in stealing $20 in Treasury notes from the Naval Hospital, at Brooklyn, was arraigned and pleaded guilty, and the Court thereupon sentenced him to pay a fine of $20 and to be imprisoned for ten days.

MONDAY, Feb. 23—P. M.

The Weekly Averages of the Banks of the City of New-York, on Saturday, Feb. 21, 1863, present in the aggregate the following changes from the previous exhibit of Feb. 14:

Increase in Loans	$252,206
Decrease in Specie	848,048
Decrease in Circulation	2,822
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	2,362,878

Including the Clearing-house operations of the week, which show the inter-exchanges between the Banks, and including also the Sub-Treasury balance at the close of the week, the following is the general comparison with the previous exhibit, and also with the movement this time last season:

	Feb. 21, 1863.	Inc. or Dec.	Feb. 22, 1862.	Feb. 14, 1863.
Capital	$60,651,000		$60,126,000	$60,126,000
Loans	139,000,000		178,336,000	176,105,992
Specie	28,075,000		37,981,414	38,426,400
Circulation	5,459,000		6,786,000	5,756,217
Gross Deposits	127,626,752		216,646,946	211,010,731
Exchanges	16,537,077		48,546,609	44,160,221
Undrawn	349,079,870		179,101,782	167,720,092
Sub-Treasury	4,355,794		10,066,135	6,834,199

The Bank return shows a further accumulation of Deposits, and places the line above $170,000,000. The other lines present a steady movement. The price of Money to-day is 6@7 ⅌ cent. to the Stock Brokers, and 6 ⅌ cent. on choice Merchant paper. The price of Gold is 2@2¼ ⅌ cent. higher than on Saturday afternoon, and the rates for Exchange on London are advanced to 181@181½ ⅌ cent. The firmness in Gold, after Saturday's closing, was not generally anticipated; but an active speculation for the rise early in the day soon advanced the price to 105 ⅌ cent., from which there was a partial decline at the 1 and 3 o'clock P. M. Boards.

The Stock Exchange responded to the additional rise in Gold Coin on the speculative Share list, and immense sales of Erie were made by a leading Bull in the Stock, at 78 ⅌ cent., availing of the sudden buoyancy. The new buyers, however, are equally strong, and, after he had closed out 10,000 Shares, the price went up to 78¾@¾ ⅌ cent., as against 76¾ on Saturday night. The Western Shares were also firm, though not advanced in the same proportion. The fluctuations in Cleveland and Pittsburgh were frequent, and the sales large at the 1 o'clock Public Board, at a sudden decline of 1½ ⅌ cent. No cause was assigned for the decline being in the stock. The Government stocks were heavy; 6s ⅌ cent. than on Saturday, as the 5 ⅌ cents of 1861 the 5½ ⅌ cent. on the 5 ⅌ cents of 1874, both of which are said to be going abroad in moderate amounts, stimulated by the large premium on bills on London. About $100,000 of the 5 ⅌ cents of 1874 were taken at 92½@93 at the early Board. Pacific Mail shares were also again higher and Panama steady. The entire movement through the day up to the 3 o'clock Board, was decidedly buoyant in prices on a large business accomplished.

At the 4 o'clock Public Board the general market was firm, with continued activity in Erie and an improved movement in Galena, Rock Island and Toledo. Pittsburgh about steady at 70 ⅌ cent. and Michigan Southern in fair request at 82½ ⅌ cent. In Gold Coin the sales were chiefly at 104½@104¾, closing 104½@¾ ⅌ cent. at the Board, but selling at a later hour at 105¼.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Active operations against Vicksburgh commenced on the 18th inst., as we learn by way of Memphis and Chicago. On that day the mortar-boats were towed into position, and opened a brisk fire, the effect of which is not yet known. Three rebel batteries responded, when the position of our boats was found to be too much exposed, and it was changed. The bombardment of Vicksburgh is known to be but a part of the general plan for its reduction. We shall hear of the rest in good time. The Indianola, which ran the blockade a short time ago, is understood to have on board coal and provisions for three months.

A dispatch from Memphis to the Western papers gives a report that the whole of Admiral PORTER's fleet will run the blockade at Vicksburgh.

Gen. HOOKER, we learn by a telegram from our correspondent, was yesterday in Washington, in consultation with the President and Secretary of War. The condition of the Army of the Potomac is said to be very good in every respect—a state of discipline having been reached which promises the best results when the time for action shall once more arrive. A number of forays have recently been made against the enemy, which have resulted in the capture of supplies and the gaining of much valuable information. The contraband trade across the Lower Potomac has been almost entirely broken up.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, reports were received from the Secretary of the Navy regarding the condition of the steamers Ossipee and Pensacola. Resolutions from the Constitutional Convention of West Virginia were presented, accepting the State Constitution as amended by Congress, and asking compensation for the emancipation of slaves. The resolution relative to the payment of foreign postage in coin, was amended so as to authorize the Postmaster-General to take such measures as he may deem necessary to provide for such payment, and passed. The Surgeon-General was called upon to submit to the Senate his materials for the medical and surgical history of the rebellion. The bill to amend the Pacific Railroad act was debated, but nothing was done with it. A bill to prevent the circulation of rebel bonds and notes in the United States was referred to the Finance Committee. A bill to establish a branch mint in Nevada was referred to the same committee. The bill relating to the discharge of State prisoners was then considered until the recess. During the proceedings a report was made from the Committee of Conference on the Legislative Appropriation bill, which was agreed to. The mileage clause is stricken out, leaving mileage the same as before. The bill regarding State prisoners was considered during the evening session.

In the House, the Senate bill providing for the holding of a Circuit Court of one district by the Judge of another, in cases of necessity, was passed. Mr. FLANDERS, member from New-Orleans, appeared and took his seat. The Committee on Elections made an unfavorable report on the credentials of C. L. GRATTON, from the Eighth District of Virginia. The adverse report in the case of JENNINGS PICQUOT, claiming a seat from North Carolina, was agreed to. The Senate's amendments to the Naval Appropriation bill were considered, and several non-concurred in. The Conscription bill was then taken up and debated until the recess, and also during the evening session—the proceedings at one time becoming somewhat excited.

GENERAL NEWS.

They have a "speck of war" on the Pacific side, growing out of a dispute regarding the boundary between California and Nevada. The scene of the trouble is in Honey Valley. On the 15th inst. a California Sheriff attempted to serve a civil process there, when he was resisted by armed residents of the valley, who fired upon him and his posse, wounding six of the latter. At last accounts both sides had sent for reinforcements, and were fortifying themselves.

A telegram from San Francisco gives advices from Mazatlan, Mexico, to the 22d inst. Four thousand Mexicans, under Gen. LA VEGA, had sailed for Acapulco. The object of the expedition is not disclosed; but it has probably something to do with the demonstration of the French fleet in that direction.

The mails by the steamship Canada reached this City last night. We find very little in our files to add to the very full summary of news telegraphed from Halifax and published yesterday morning.

There were 454 deaths in this City, during the past week, of the following and other causes: Consumption, 47; convulsions, 19; inflammation of the lungs, 41; diphtheria, 10; fevers, 35; dropsy, 20; croup, 18; heart disease, 8; exhaustion, 7; drowned, 7. Forty-nine deaths occurred in the various public institutions.

The price of Gold Coin advanced ¼ ⅌ cent. yesterday, closing at 1002; Exchange, 1018. Money, ⅞@1 ⅌ cent. Share market firm and advancing; Erie, 75¾ ⅌ cent.

Business was partially suspended yesterday. The Produce Exchange was closed throughout the day, and movements in Breadstuffs, Provisions and Whisky were restricted and very irregular; prices, however, favored sellers. A moderate demand prevailed for Groceries, holders of which appeared less eager to sell. Placentio, Raisins and desirable qualities of Teas were in active request at advancing rates. Middling Cotton was up to 80c.@91c. ⅌ lb., with more doing. A fair inquiry prevailed for Hay, Hops, Hides, Tallow and Tobacco, at buoyant prices. The freight engagements were extremely limited. Other branches of trade exhibited no important alterations.

The Live Stock markets are out of joint. The severe snow-storm blocked up the roads and delayed the stock trains on the Hudson River and Erie Roads until last evening. Only 600 cattle were on sale yesterday, and for these such high prices were asked as led the butchers to hold off for the bulk of the stock, which will be in the yards to-day. A fair supply is anticipated. Good cattle commanded 10c.@10½c. ⅌ lb., and extra animals 11c.

The Spirit in Maryland and in New-York.

VALLANDIGHAM cannot speak in Baltimore, as advertised. The Union masses of that city are in no mood to stand his traitorous rant. His bridge-burning friends find it will not do, and warn him off. And yet this same traitor held forth before an applauding audience in Newark a fortnight ago, and is announced to speak before the "Democratic Association" of this City, where he will surely be cheered to the echo.

Says the Baltimore American, the oldest and ablest paper in that city: "The duty of the loyal is plain—they must insist that the Government shall no longer tolerate treasonable displays within the Union lines; that if such are ventured upon, imprisonment here or transportation across the rebel lines shall be the penalty at once to be enforced." The two Maryland Congressmen, Messrs. THOMAS and LEARY, in their recent noble speeches, declared in the emphatic terms that the arrests by the Government were heartily approved by all the Union men of the State, and that the only fault found was that they were not sufficiently numerous. And yet we find journals of this City, and all through the North, "tearing passion to tatters," because the Administration has ventured to make any summary arrests at all. They have raved over the particular necessity of a speedy indictment and jury trial for every man charged with treasonable practices. There has been neither measure nor end to their denunciations of the Government for trespassing upon what they style the inviolable rights of the citizen in this regard.

Now, how happens it that the Unionists of Maryland complain of the Administration for making too few arrests, while the Democrats of New-York stigmatize it with every odious epithet because it makes any? This, too, in face of the fact that twenty arrests have been made in Maryland where one has been made in New-York. How happens it, again, that the Unionists of Baltimore should deem it an intolerable insult and outrage that the man VALLANDIGHAM should wag his tongue in that city, while here his harangues are not only solicited, but, when they come, will be greeted, as in Newark, with "tremendous applause!" To these questions there can be but one reply. The difference between the Marylanders and these Northern people who thus act, is that the former are true and earnest Union men, and that the latter are not. If the former will not abide VALLANDIGHAM, it is because they abhor the rebellion and all who would make terms with it. If the latter welcome VALLANDIGHAM, it is because they are partial to the rebellion, and would court its kind graces. If the former demand more arrests, it is because they long to see every abettor of the rebellion, and the rebellion itself, disabled. If the latter denounce all arrests, it is because they would give every abettor of the rebellion, and the rebellion itself, free range. No other rational solution of the difference in these manifestations is possible.

In the Border States the lines are closely drawn between loyal and disloyal men. Even party names go for nothing. Mere professions, without corresponding conduct, impose upon nobody. The man who acts in the interest of the rebels, whatever he styles himself, is accounted no better than a rebel. The only political distinction recognized in Baltimore is that between the Loyalists and the Secessionists. And so it would be in New-York, if things were called here by their right names. The wretched sham of professing to be loyal, and yet laboring systematically to discredit and cripple the Government and buy peace at any price, would be blasted with general contempt. Public opinion would hold men to the logical consequences of their words and acts. A man would no more be tolerated in advocating armistice resolutions in the street than he would be in unfurling the rebel flag from his window. VALLANDIGHAM or VOORHEES would no more be listened to than COXE or TOOMBS. There was a time when the patriotic feeling of this City was fairly up to that level—a time when the Day Book and the Daily News went down amid universal execration, and faction and sedition in every form shrank appalled. Why should it be different now? Has the Republic come to be worth less? Is the rebellion any the less wicked or destructive?

The wretched excuses are put forward that the war has been mismanaged, and that the Emancipation Proclamation ought never to have been issued. Even if these things were true, how do they absolve from the duty of loyalty? And why should they tell against the support of Government more in New-York than in Maryland? Have we more in peril from the Anti-Slavery policy of the President than Maryland, with its hundred thousand slaves? Do the evil effects of bad military management come closer home to us than to Maryland, to whose soil it has once brought, and might again bring, the grand army of the rebels? If, in spite of these things, the loyalty of Maryland has grown the stronger, of what stuff must our loyalty be made if by reason of them it has wilted and languished? The pretext is false. Its use is an insult to the public understanding. The men who, in this manner, apologize for their present complaisance toward the rebellion, ought to be pilloried as hypocrites from the beginning.

An Undiscriminating War.

We have an announcement now and then from the West that the gunboats or National forces have destroyed this or that town or landing on the Mississippi River, "in retaliation for the firing of guerrillas on steamboats from the place." This sort of news is more or less gratifying to the public, because it conveys the idea of prompt punishment for a very foolish and cruel style of warfare frequently adopted by the rebels.

We are in possession of information, however, which places these transactions in a less favorable light, and leads us to doubt the justice or the chivalry of the mode of revenge adopted for these river annoyances. The supposition that the inhabitants of the little towns on the river bank harbor and encourage the bandits that occasionally come in to assail passing steamboats, is contrary to reason, as we are assured it is to fact. These resident people feel and know themselves to be entirely unprotected and at the mercy of the gunboats that are constantly patroling the river in their front. To provoke the National forces by so silly an act as firing on a passing boat, is but to bring down utter ruin on their homes from the next gunboat that comes by. The fact is, that the people resident on the western river banks are disposed to be on the best terms with the National forces, and desire to have the navigation of the river free and harmless. They institute, whenever and wherever they can, a petty trade with the boats and with the country back of them, and they profit largely wherever they are permitted to do so. They know the guerrillas, by their predatory invasions to the river side, as their deadliest enemies, and dread their coming as an event threatening them with calamity.

It may be said that the residents of the villages and landings on the river should organize and keep the guerillas away. But this suggestion comes from ignorance of facts. The truth is that people in the Southwestern seceded States were, at the beginning of the war wholly disarmed by the rebels, on the pretence of arming the Confederate soldiers in the field. But the arms so gathered up were not used in the field, we know. The intention was merely to take them from the hands of the masses, whose fidelity to treason was distrusted. It is because the people are unarmed that very small guerilla squads can enter western villages with impunity, and put the lives and property of hundreds of noncombatants in peril.

Another fact serves to strengthen the view of the case we are taking. The guerrillas that depredate in the Southwest are rarely citizens of the locality where their evil deeds are committed. Their sets are those of unrestrained brigandage, and those who follow the lawless pursuit find it easier to prey on strangers than upon the people with whom they have ties of acquaintance and consanguinity. Hence the guerrilla bands are generally not citizens of the county that is cursed by their presence, and care nothing for the "retaliation" that follows their acts; and to burn a town because guerrillas have been found lurking and depredating in it, is merely to crush a people by national wrath whom internal enemies have signalized by their unwelcome and disastrous presence. We have unquestionable information that much cruel wrong has been done to wholly innocent communities by the thoughtless destruction of their homes, in consequence of guerrilla parties being found in the vicinity. This is a cheap mode of earning military fame; and Western Commanders should see to it that more discrimination is observed, in future, in trying to punish guerillas. If the miscreants cannot be followed and chastised, in propria persona, it is a poor satisfaction to burn houses that shelter women and children; which houses, perhaps, the guerrillas have plundered before leaving.

PROFITABLE NEGROES.—There has been a great outcry made by the Anti-Administration presses of the North about the enormous expense of supporting the freed slaves of the South within our lines. One would think from the Express, for instance, that this expense equaled the entire cost of the army and navy, and was rapidly bringing the finances of the country to ruin.

Negroes at Washington, negroes at Fortress Monroe, negroes in North Carolina and South Carolina, negroes in Louisiana, negroes in Arkansas, negroes in Tennessee, and all these fattening on the Government and idling away their time in the sun. The most atrocious of all these cases was, of course, at Port Royal—for there the Government had undertaken the charge of the plantations and the supervision of the negroes. Not only had the Ethiopians there schools and teachers, not only were they fed with all the delicacies of the season, not only were our troops subordinated to their whims and caprices, not only did they spend all their days in sunning themselves, and all their nights in prayer-meetings and breakdowns,—but all this, and a great deal more, was paid for out of the United States Treasury, and squeezed out of the empty pockets of unfortunate white men.

It turns out, however, that it is all a mistake, and that the Treasury of the United States is actually receiving aid, and the white folks of the North comfort and relief from the labor of these Port Royal Ethiopians. Mr. Secretary CHASE has transmitted to Congress a brief report concerning the cultivation of the plantations at Port Royal, and the expenses and receipts connected therewith for the first year of their operations. From this it appears that the total expenses for the period were, in round numbers, a quarter of a million of dollars, and the receipts three-quarters of a million; and there is now in the hands of the Assistant Treasurer at New-York a half million of dollars saved through these operations, which, says Mr. CHASE, belongs more rightfully to the laborers who planted, cultivated and gathered the cotton, than to any other possible claimant. The management of the negroes and the cultivation of the soil has, since the time up to which this report comes, been transferred from the Treasury to the War Department; but we have no doubt that Secretary STANTON, at the close of next year, will be able to make an equally favorable exhibit.

We have already had an inkling of this report by telegraph, but it is well worthy of reading and study. The negroes have enough sins, including their black skins, to bear, without having to endure all the false assertions of their malignant foes in the North.

Hostility to the War for Preserving the Union.

The Northern Dissentients who are now laboring to demoralize the army, paralyze the Administration, and bring the war to a conclusion by some means or other, be they fair or be they foul, are very indignant over the hard names which their opponents apply to them, and over the doubts thrown upon their honesty and patriotism. They insist also upon being treated as ordinary political adversaries, whose opinions happen to differ from those of the rest of the community upon a mere question of expediency. They demand, in short, all the rights, privileges, and immunities of an ordinary political party, which has, in common with the rest of us, the good of the nation in view, but does not agree with us as to the best means of attaining it.

We, however, are not disposed to admit their claim to any of these things, for the simple reason that if we accord to them the status and honors of constitutional opposition, we accord to the South the status and honors of an independent nation, and our contest with them is either an outrageous effort to conquer them, or a mere quarrel about boundaries or the navigation of the Mississippi, and by no means a war for the Union. It is only, be it remembered, about a war affecting the national honor, or national influence, or the possession of conquered provinces or dependencies, that the utterance of two different opinions has in any free country been ever tolerated or respected. The nature and value of honor and the nature and value of influence, and the advantage of keeping this province or that fortress, are things as disputable and as intangible as taste. Men's opinions about them may differ widely as the poles asunder, without touching or damaging the fundamental bases of nationality, or draining one drop from the sources of the national strength. England might abandon Turkey to France and Russia to-morrow, or surrender Gibraltar to Spain, and be England still, as great, as powerful and as terrible as ever. The Queen's claims upon the allegiance of every man born under her sway would not be weakened by one iota; no constitutional doctrine or dogma would have suffered the smallest infringement. The British nation, in short, would remain whole and intact.

The claims of the Brookses, and Vallandighams, and Tildens, to be considered disciples and successors of BURKE and CHATHAM, are about as worthy of consideration as their pretensions to equality with them in eloquence and attainments—which, however, we respect our native agitators too much to charge them with putting forward. BURKE and CHATHAM supported the cause of American Independence, first, because they believed the colonies had just cause for revolt; and secondly, because the acknowledgment of it—though it might leave the empire somewhat smaller in extent, would not in the least degree diminish the force and validity of the British Constitution. None knew better than BURKE that the right to rebel when one pleases is simply a basis for anarchy, and bears about the same relation to the right of revolution that mayhem bears to surgery.

We shall not do more than allude to the manner adopted by the French of dealing with "their opposition," when a crisis occurred in their affairs somewhat analogous to that which is now occurring in ours. Neither their laws, nor manners, nor motives of Government furnish safe models for our imitation; but their procedure in 1792 and '3 is a useful subject of study, in so far as it shows what the "natural man" will do when desperately defending the national existence against foes within and foes without. The "gentlemanly" party and "diffusers of political knowledge" had emigrated, and were begging foreign Powers—as MASON and SLIDELL are now doing—to invade their country and put down the lawless Republicans and their Constitution, sword in hand. Others of them had gone to LA VENDÉE and raised "their friends of the South" and "Conservatives" in armed insurrection. The consequence was that the rest of the French nation first executed in cold blood every one of the aristocrats whom they could catch at home, and then shouldered their muskets and marched to the frontier. They made very poor work of it at first, and furnished the "gentlemanly" Frenchmen, as well as foreigners, with much matter for amusement and glorification, but they did not stop fighting until they taught Europe a lesson that will not be forgotten as long as our civilization lasts. They were guilty of many crimes and excesses, but they saved France, and made her to be "the dread and envy of the world."

Our "Conservatives" confess that the rebellion is wicked and causeless; that its success will seal our destruction as a nation; that an acknowledgment of the right of secession would be tantamount to an annulling of the Constitution; and yet they ask us to hear them meekly, and remonstrate with them gently, while they seek to stay our arm every blow we strike, and insist upon our conducting the war just as if it were a war with a foreign Power, which we might bring to a close to-morrow without any other damage than the loss of so many soldiers and so much money. This, however, is asking a great deal too much of us. It is asking more than any nation has ever accorded. It is asking us to set an example of indifferentism and imbecility which would be in itself a symptom of approaching and well-merited ruin. And they may rely upon it they will not be gratified. We are willing to accord them "belligerent rights," everything that humanity and expediency and self-respect demand, but nothing more. We do not recommend their arrest and imprisonment, for the same reason that we do not recommend the hanging of every rebel taken in arms. But, on the other hand, did we feel we were bound to treat and speak of them as honest political opponents, traveling by another road to the same goal as ourselves, then we should feel bound to treat and speak of JEFF. DAVIS as if he were a WASHINGTON, or of BRAGG as if he were a MORGAN or GARIBALDI. In judging rebels, we must be allowed what "the diffusers of political information" will probably think the ridiculous privilege of attaching some importance to their motives and purposes.

UNEMPLOYED GENERALS.—We hope the Government will lose no time in complying with the requests understood to have been made by Gens. FREMONT and MCCLELLAN for active employment. Both have been out of service long enough. Both have military ability of a certain kind, without doubt, and the country certainly needs all the ability of this sort which it can command. The military capacity of both is unquestionably very much exaggerated by their special political admirers, but this affords no excuse for leaving them idle. There is a class of politicians who believe that if Gen. MCCLELLAN were at the head of the army, the war would somehow or other come to an end;—and another portion of the public believe that Gen. FREMONT would also end it, if he were only in command. Upon what these respective opinions rest it would not be easy to say. Nothing that either of these distinguished Generals has actually done, gives, so far as we can see, any warrant for such a judgment. Nevertheless, both of them have ability, and the Government is in duty bound to give the country the benefit of it. It can certainly assign to each some command which will furnish full scope for his peculiar capacity. It need not send them where their presence will be especially distasteful, or where the special faculty of each will not be required. Gen. MCCLELLAN would not be particularly useful in any Department where dash and vigorous fighting were needed, nor would Gen. FREMONT be able to render valuable service in any quarter especially sensitive on the question of Slavery. But the Government can certainly find some suitable position in which each may make himself useful. There is no good reason for leaving them in absolute idleness, at so heavy an expense to the country, while new Generals, without knowledge or experience of military affairs, are appointed by the hundred.

PRIZE CASES.—The Secretary of the Navy has transmitted to Congress a report, giving details concerning of the vessels captured by our navy in running the blockade. Three hundred and sixty-seven prizes are reported, thirty-five of which are steamers: but the number is far greater than this, though the Secretary is not at present able to report them. The information is full concerning all the cases in the Courts at New-York, Boston and Philadelphia. The Secretary mentions the evils and dangers arising to the Government from the delay in the disposal of many of these cases; and he might also have mentioned the dissatisfaction in the navy arising from the same cause. We know that, under the circumstances of some of the cases, delay was unavoidable; but we trust that the proper parties will now, for the benefit of all concerned, hasten forward all adjudications in prize cases.

A FALSE ARGUMENT.—The Leader of last week, in its military department, contends vehemently against the constitutionality of the new Conscription law, and says:

"To prove our assertion, we will now quote the Constitution. It expresses, in plain, unvarnished terms, 'that no able-bodied man, when called into the service of the United States, shall be compelled to serve for a longer period than three months after arriving at the place of rendezvous, nor longer than any one of his neighbors.' It further provides that militia organizations shall possess such rights as may be granted to them by their respective States."

We have only to say on this subject that there is no such language in the Constitution, as the Leader pretends to quote from it,—nor is there any such sentiment in it as the one embodied in this pretended extract. The whole thing is a forgery. Possibly the military editor of the Leader has mistaken some other Constitution for that of the United States.

EQUAL COMMERCE.—When the Senate passed a bill, a few days ago, authorizing the issue of letters-of-marque and reprisal, it was opposed by a number of Senators on the ground that the rebels had no commerce on which our privateers could prey, and that the measure would only be significant as a menace to French and English commerce, in case foreign intervention in the American war was attempted. The friends of the bill did not hesitate to accept and justify this alternative construction of the act, if any European Government were minded to so understand it. Why should not France and England count the cost of hostilities with the United States, while considering the grave diplomatic questions that the war is giving rise to? And why should not the issue of letters-of-marque and reprisal be classed among the risks they must run, seeing how much the rebel endeavors in this line against American commerce have been fostered in foreign harbors and shipyards?

It appears, however, that the rebel commerce on the high seas is not so insignificant as some of our national legislators were disposed to believe. A letter from Nassau, N. P., dated Feb. 9, states that there were at that time in the harbor of Nassau about "fifty vessels, more than half of which were flying the secession flag." Now, here is quite a flock of Confederate sea birds, which it would be worth while to have followed and captured when they break cover. If the House shall take the view that the Senate has taken of the propriety of issuing letters-of-marque and reprisal, the probability is that much less will be heard, when Congress meets again, of the successful entry of ship loads of merchandise into Southern ports than now vexes the souls of patriotic people. The rebels will doubtless watch with no little foreboding, the action of the House on the Senate bill. It threatens them more seriously than anything our Navy Department is preparing for them. It will put an extinguisher on attempts to run the blockade, by sweeping from the seas the vessels that are seeking to run it.

AMUSEMENTS.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—In the absence of English opera, it is well to be content with the suggestion of it given by Mr. and Miss RIDGWAY in their exclusively musical and dramatic entertainment. The lady is blessed by nature with a fine voice, and practice has taught her how to use it in the best way for pleasing the public; the gentleman is experienced in stage affairs, and is, we presume, responsible for the vehicle of his daughter's talent. In the case of "Satanella," he has seized upon a popular work by a pleasing composer, and retaining the most salient of the melodies, has reconstructed the plot to suit it for dialogue, pantomime and ballet. The task is not an easy one, nor has it been discharged with facility. A large amount of after-thought will have to be exercised before the piece (presented last night) can claim any merit on the score of construction, and extensive excision must be practiced before it can be acceptable, even as regards length. The interest of the performance centered almost exclusively upon Miss RIDGWAY, who sang several morceaux with good effect, and was encored in "The Glorious Vintage of Champagne." Aided by a chorus (strong in the male department,) and an increased orchestra, under Mr. HARVEY B. DOWNING, these musical suggestions of the parent work were always acceptable. The scenery and dresses were good, the latter especially so; but the working of the machinery was intolerably bad, and by delaying the performance until near midnight seriously jeopardized its success. A defect of this kind will, of course, be immediately remedied. At an establishment so admirably and lavishly conducted as Niblo's, it should never be noticeable. There is an excellent corps de ballet, and several fine dancers have been expressly engaged to give importance to this department, so that when the work has been reduced to proper limits, it will present many claims to public consideration. Its success, last evening, was not of a very hearty character.

GERMAN OPERA IN BROOKLYN.—Mr. ARNDHOLZ will give his last evening performance in Brooklyn to-night. The opera selected for the occasion is the highly amusing one of "The Poacher"—a work which charms as well as makes merry. The Brooklyn series of performances will close on Saturday with FLOTOW's "Martha," performed at a Matinee.

CONCERT.—The members of the Liederkranz give a grand concert at Irving Hall to-night, with full orchestra and chorus.

WINTER GARDEN.—Miss MARY PERTON, an actress of great versatility, who has recently been creating a considerable sensation in other cities, appeared last evening at this Theatre in the character of Parthenia, and was warmly welcomed by, considering the other attractions of the night, a very numerous audience. The part of Parthenia, selected by Miss PERTON for her opening, is one not so familiar to play-goers as it was some years since. It offers, however, to Miss PERTON, ample opportunity for the display of her singular power of intensity and of that expression of the passion of love in which she is unexcelled. At the close of the second act she was summoned twice before the curtain by a burst of enthusiastic acclamation such as an audience is seldom now-a-days roused to. If the verdict of last night may be regarded as a herald of success, we predict for Miss PERTON a most brilliant engagement. The part of Ingomar found a very admirable representative in Mr. BARRETT, and the other characters were efficiently filled. "Ingomar" will be repeated this evening.

BENEFIT OF MISS GANNON.—In the distribution of "benefits" at Wallack's Miss MARY GANNON's turn comes to-night. She is sure to have a crammed house, for although there are many actors and actresses of higher pretensions and of greater talent, here are none more admirable in their way or more thoroughly established in the favor and admiration of the public. There is a natural ease and naiveté in all her personations, which is far more winning than the most finished art.

LECTURE ON BRAZIL.—Rev. J. C. FLETCHER delivers, to-morrow evening, at the Cooper Institute, the second lecture of his series on South America. His subject will be Brazil Revisited. Mr. FLETCHER has been familiar for many years with the social and political institutions of Brazil, as well as with its natural scenery and resources, and is abundantly capable of giving the public full and reliable information in regard to it. He is a fluent and agreeable speaker, and his lecture will fully reward the attention of those who may go to hear it.

PICTURE SALE.—A large number of connoisseurs and picture lovers have within the last few days visited the Galleries of the Art Institute to view the collection of Mr. T. A. RICHARDS, which are to be sold to-night. There are 150 of the works of this well-known artist on exhibition, embracing landscapes, studies, sketches, "fruit, flowers and there pieces." The landscapes are all American, and comprise views North and South. The fruits and flowers, too, are all native, and to the continent born. Some of the pieces are very charming—well drawn, finely colored, and vital. If the sale be as well attended as the exhibition has been, and the attendants be as lavish in their bids as visitors have been in their praises, the Secretary of the Academy will achieve a pecuniary success equal to his artistic triumph.

The Slave Property of the Late Charles Carroll.

BALTIMORE, Md., Monday, Feb. 23.

The appraisers of the slave property of the late CHARLES CARROLL, of this State, one of the largest slaveowners in Maryland, have made their returns to the Orphans' Court, assessing the value of 120 slaves at an average of only $5 each. This, they say, was the highest rate they could name, after consulting with numerous slaveowners and dealers. One slavedealer told the Appraisers he would not give $500 for the whole lot. This is considered a striking illustration of the depreciation of slave property by the rebellion, and will have a powerful influence in this State.

Fire at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Monday, Feb. 23.

A fire broke out early this morning on Main-street, in TALLEY's looking-glass factory. His stock was destroyed; loss $20,000—insured for $10,000.

The following stores were also damaged: the clothing establishment of HENRY BROWN—stock saved; the boot and shoe establishment of O. F. RAMSDELL & Co.—stock valued at $75,000; insured $30,000; the boot and shoe store of FUSS & SWASS—stock valued at $6,000; fully insured.

The paper-hanging establishment of BIRGE & Co. and the store of BOZZER & DOMBROWS were damaged by water. Their losses are fully insured.

The total loss is estimated at $123,000, which is mostly insured.

Disaster to the Ship Colombo.

BOSTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

The ship Colombo, from Boston for Kurrachee, put into St. George, Bermuda, in distress, leaking badly.

IMPORTANT FROM VICKSBURGH.

The Bombardment Begun on February 16.

Three Rebel Batteries Respond to the Fire from the Mortarboats.

The Gunboat Indianola Provisioned and Coaled for Three Months.

CHICAGO, Monday, Feb. 23.

A special dispatch from Memphis, dated on Saturday, furnishes us with advices from Vicksburgh to the 16th instant.

Active hostilities against Vicksburgh commenced on that day.

The mortar-boats were towed into position, and opened the ball by firing briskly. The effect of their shots was not known.

The firing was responded to by three Confederate batteries, when our position was found to be too much exposed for effective operations, and was changed.

The bombardment was then renewed.

The gunboat Indianola, which run the blockade, had provisions and coal sufficient to last her three months.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

ARMY CORPS, Monday, Feb. 23.

The anniversary of WASHINGTON'S birth-day was celebrated yesterday by the Army of the Potomac, notwithstanding the prevailing tempest, by salutes from several batteries. Nothing of the kind was heard from the rebel batteries on the south side of the Rappahannock.

A snow-storm commenced late Saturday night and continued till yesterday afternoon, drifting, in some places, two to three feet. The depth of snow over-again about seven inches. The shelter-tents of the soldiers afforded but poor protection from the storm. Last night the atmosphere was piercingly cold, causing some frost-bitten extremities. Previous to the storm the mud had partially dried up, but now many days must elapse in the peculiar locality before the roads will become passable under the most favorable auspices.

THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Monday, Feb. 23.

Authentic advices say that the rebel army is in the vicinity of McMinnville, Tenn.

Rumors unauthenticated and discredited, speak of the rebel forces in the vicinity of Richmond, Ky.

THE MAILS BY THE CANADA.

The Queen's Speech in Full.

The mails by the Canada reached this City last night. Our files contain nothing of special importance not given in the very full summary of news telegraphed from Halifax.

The Queen's Speech.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN: Her Majesty commands us to inform you that, since you were last assembled, she has declared her consent to a marriage between His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and Her Royal Highness the Princess ALEXANDRA, a daughter of Prince CHRISTIAN, of Denmark, and Her Majesty has concluded thereupon a treaty with the King of Denmark, which will be laid before you.

The constant proofs which Her Majesty has received of your attachment to her person and family persuade her that you will participate in her sentiments on an event so interesting to Her Majesty, and which, with the blessing of God, will, she trusts, prove so conclusive to the happiness of her family and to the welfare of her people.

Her Majesty doubts not that you will enable her to make provision for such an establishment as you may think suitable to the rank and dignity of the Heir Apparent to the crown of these realms.

A revolution having taken place in Greece, by which the throne of that kingdom has become vacant, the Greek nation have expressed the strongest desire that Her Majesty's son, Prince ALFRED, should accept the Greek Crown. This unsolicited and spontaneous manifestation of good will toward Her Majesty and her family, and of a due appreciation of the benefits conferred by the principle and practice of the British Constitution, could not fail to be highly gratifying, and has been deeply felt by Her Majesty. But difficulties of diplomatic engagements of Her Majesty's Crown, together with other weighty considerations, have prevented Her Majesty from yielding to this general wish of the Greek nation.

Her Majesty trusts, however, the same principles of choice which led the Greek nation to direct their thoughts in the first instance toward His Royal Highness Prince ALFRED, may guide them to the selection of a Sovereign under whose sway the Kingdom of Greece may enjoy the blessings of internal prosperity, and of peaceful relations with other States. And if, in such a state of things, the Ionian Islands should declare a deliberate wish to be united to the Kingdom of Greece, Her Majesty would be prepared to take such steps as may be necessary for a revision of the treaty of November, 1815, by which that Republic was reconstituted and was placed under the protection of the British Crown.

Her Majesty's relations with foreign Powers continue to be friendly and satisfactory.

Her Majesty has abstained from taking any step with a view to induce a cessation of the conflict between the United States and the Southern States, because it has not yet seemed to her Majesty that any such overtures could be attended with a probability of success.

Her Majesty has viewed with the deepest concern the destructive conflict which still rages in these regions, and she has witnessed with heartfelt grief the severe distress and suffering which that war has inflicted upon a large class of Her Majesty's subjects, but which have been borne by them with noble fortitude and with exemplary resignation. It is some consolation to Her Majesty to be led to hope that this suffering and distress are rather diminishing than increasing, and that some revival of employment is beginning to take place in the manufacturing districts.

It has been most gratifying to Her Majesty to witness the abundant generosity with which all classes of her subjects in all parts of her empire have contributed to relieve the wants of their suffering fellow-countrymen and the liberality with which Her Majesty's colonial subjects have on this occasion given their aid has proved that, although their dwelling-places are far away, their hearts are still warm with unbroken affection for the land of their fathers. The relief committees have superintended with economy and laborious attendance the distribution of the funds intrusted to their charge.

Her Majesty commands us to inform you that she has concluded with the King of the Belgians a treaty of commerce and navigation, and a convention respecting joint stock companies. That treaty and that convention will be laid before you.

Her Majesty has likewise given directions that there shall be laid before you papers relating to the affairs of Italy, of Greece, and Denmark, and that papers shall also be laid before you relating to occurrences which have lately taken place in Japan.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS: Her Majesty has directed that the estimates for the ensuing year shall be laid before you. They have been prepared with a due regard to economy and will provide for such reductions of expenditure as have appeared to be consistent with the proper efficiency of the public service.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN: We are commanded by Her Majesty to inform you that, notwithstanding the continuance of the civil war in America, the general commerce of the country, during the past year, has not sensibly diminished. The treaty of commerce which Her Majesty concluded with the Emperor of the French has already been productive of results highly advantageous to both the nations to which it applies; and the general state of the revenue, notwithstanding many unfavorable circumstances, have not been unsatisfactory. Her Majesty trusts that these results may be taken as proofs that the productive resources of the country are unimpaired.

It has been gratifying to Her Majesty to observe the spirit of order which happily prevails throughout her dominions, and which is so essential an element in the well-being and prosperity of nations.

Various measures of public usefulness and improvement will be submitted for your consideration; and Her Majesty fervently prays that in all your deliberations the blessing of Almighty God may guide your counsels to the promotion of the welfare and happiness of her people.

IMPORTANT FROM THE PACIFIC.

A Dispute About the Boundary Between California and Nevada.

Four Thousand Mexicans en Route to Acapulco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Saturday, Feb. 21.

A serious controversy is going on in Honey Lake Valley, over the boundary question, between California and Nevada—both sides claiming jurisdiction over the land in dispute.

The California Sheriff attempted to serve a civil process on the 15th inst., when the residents of the Valley armed themselves and fired on the Sheriff and his posse comitatus. Six of the Sheriff's men were wounded.

The Sheriff then sent for reinforcements, and his assailants are also expecting reinforcements.

Both parties are ready, defiant, and, of last accounts, were fortifying themselves in log-houses.

A schooner just arrived brings advices from Mazatlan to the 23d of January.

Four thousand Mexicans, commanded by Gen. LA VEGA, had sailed for Acapulco. The object of the movement was unknown.

Movements of Gen. Wool.

BOSTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

Gen. WOOL and Staff arrived to-night. The members of the Governor's Council met them at the depot, where a large crowd had gathered, giving hearty cheers to the veteran warrior. The General has rooms at the Tremont House.

The Storm at Fortress Monroe.

FORTRESS MONROE, Monday, Feb. 23.

A severe storm commenced here early Saturday morning. Six schooners are ashore at Old Point and Hampton Beach, viz.: the E. W. Harrington, Elliot, Alvora, J. H. Cunningham, Hopkins Chester, and D. E. Sweper.

FASHIONS FOR MARCH.

ILLUSTRATIONS.—Carriage Dress and Girl's Toilet.—Home Toilet.

In the present Number of HARPER'S MAGAZINE, Mr. J. ROSS BROWNE gives the conclusion of his Visit to Iceland. This will be followed next month by an illustrated paper from the same author, describing the manners and customs of the Russian people as seen in Moscow. "The paper on Continental Money" is a Monetary Record of special interest at the present time. It is the most perfect monograph yet written upon this subject, giving fac-similes of the principal descriptions of the Paper Currency issued by the States and the Continental Congress, and the issues of Scrip of every denomination of Continental Bills of Credit.

This Number contains contributions from Benson J. Lossing, Charlotte Taylor, J. Ross Browne, Jane G. Fuller, J. W. De Forest, Marian G. Evans, Alfred H. Guernsey, Caroline Chesebro', J. H. Stoddard, Laura C. Redden, George William Curtis, Elizabeth D. B. Stedman, Anthony Trollope, Clifton Stickney, Mary E. Bradley, Samuel Osgood, and others.

The illustrations are mainly from original drawings by GRAVES, BELLEW, FERNINE, STEPHENS, VOLOT, HOPPIN, JEWETT and McLENEE, and have been engraved by the most eminent artists of the country. It is an example which exceeds that of the entire period of the literary matter and illustrations of any other Magazine in the world. As an illustrated Magazine, in which the pencil of the Artist aids and supplements the pen of the Writer, HARPER'S MAGAZINE has no rival, while it furnishes in addition a large amount of reading matter that is given in any other Magazine in Europe or America.

The papers of permanent value which have been published in almost every Number render a complete set of HARPER'S MAGAZINE a desirable acquisition to any public or private library. The publishers can supply complete sets, or any number from the commencement. For Twenty-five Cents they will send any Number by mail, postpaid. Any Volume containing six Numbers, bound in Muslin, will be mailed, postpaid, to any place in the United States within 3,000 miles of New-York, for Two Dollars and Fifty Cents. Complete sets, now comprising Twenty-five Volumes, uniformly bound, will be sent by express, the freight at the charge of the purchaser, for One Dollar and Eighty-eight Cents per volume.

A SONG OF HEALTH, HAPPINESS AND GLORY.

O, well may you call me the Magic
With health for the body and soul,
And nought of the dark, deadly poison
Is often in Bacchus' bowl!
I scatter the fierce fiends of fever,
Give purity's self to the breath;
Send changes of water and diet,
And cure the Cholera—Death!
Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
" Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
Yes, shout for Drake's Plantation Bitters
And the magical "S. T." and "X I!"

I cheer up the desolate spirit;
I gild the sad heart with my light,
Like stars shedding cloud-vanquishing splendor,
Through all the dark chambers of night.
The pleasant, but mechanical stimulants,
And farmed, drink-in-moderation bitters!
Never bled half a year's when giving
The dew-rose of morning for kisses.
Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
Shout aloud for the Plantation Bitters
And the magical "S. T. and X I!"

What wonder I bear to the soldier
With Liberty's banner unfurled?
A draught and he'll laugh at all cannon,
Though shaking the hills of the world;
And what cares the gallant bold sailor
For the tempest if strengthened by me?
With chosen for Columbia he carries
Triumphant her glorious flag!
Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
Cry aloud the Plantation Bitters
And the magical "S. T." and "X I!"

Then well may you call me the Magic
With health for the body and soul,
And nought of the dark, deadly poison
Is often in "Bacchus" bowl!
For youth, manhood, age, was I shattered,
By disease and health, as my mark,
And thus with the status of slave
Stand guard on my throne on the earth!
Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
Hurrah for the "S. T." and "X I!"
Yes, yell for the Plantation Bitters
And the magical "S. T." and "X I!"

Drake's Plantation Bitters are the most wonderful medicine and gentle stimulant in the world. All invalids and weak persons should try it. Sold throughout the civilized world.

MELANCHOLY—A DISEASE. THE REMEDY.

The word melancholy, signifying "black bile," truly characterizes the mental disorder which bears that name, showing that it is in reality a bodily disease. When the bile is vitiated, great depression of spirits and many other distressing symptoms ensue. The liver is the seat of bile and the proper action of the bile depends on the action of the liver; the offices of that organ are to secrete the bile and to strain the blood; when these duties are imperfectly performed, the unhealthy bile is often carried into the circulation, producing Jaundice, Drowsiness, Headache, Dyspepsia, Hypochondria, Mental Depression, and sometimes Madness. Physicians generally suppose, or pretend, that a diseased liver cannot be cured without calomel; but that dangerous remedy often proves worse than the disease itself. Dr. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS, which act immediately on the liver, are preferable to calomel in every respect, as they have all the virtues attributed to that article, and being purely vegetable, they never subject the patient to any alarming or disagreeable consequences. These pills are an efficient cure for melancholy and all other diseases originating in a diseased liver.

Remember, DR. SCHENCK'S rooms in this City are at No. 32 Bond-st., where he can be found every TUESDAY from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M. He always keeps a fresh supply of medicines at his rooms, which can be had any day, whether the Doctor is there or not.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS.

A PURE AND POWERFUL TONIC, CORRECTIVE AND ALTERATIVE OF WONDERFUL EFFICACY IN DISEASE OF THE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.

PROTECTIVE PROPERTIES.

PREVENTS FEVER AND AGUE AND BILIOUS REMITTENT FEVER, FORTIFIES THE SYSTEM AGAINST MIASMA AND THE EVIL EFFECTS OF UNWHOLESOME WATER; INVIGORATES THE ORGANS OF DIGESTION AND THE BOWELS;

STRENGTHENS THE NERVES, AND TENDS TO PROLONG LIFE.

REMEDIAL PROPERTIES.

CURES DYSPEPSIA, LIVER COMPLAINT, SICK AND NERVOUS HEADACHE, GENERAL DEBILITY, NERVOUSNESS, DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS, CONSTIPATION, COLIC, INTERMITTENT FEVERS, SEA-SICKNESS, CRAMPS AND SPASMS, AND ALL COMPLAINTS OF EITHER SEX, ARISING FROM BODILY WEAKNESS, WHETHER INHERENT IN THE SYSTEM OR PRODUCED BY SPECIAL CAUSES.

Nothing that is not wholesome, genial, and restorative in its nature enters into the composition of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. This popular preparation contains no mineral of any kind; no deadly botanical element; no fiery spirituous; but is a combination of the extracts of rare balsamic herbs and plants with the purest and mildest of all diffusive stimulants.

It is well to be forearmed against disease, and, so far as the human system can be protected by human means against maladies engendered by an unwholesome atmosphere, impure water, and other external causes, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS may be relied on as a safeguard.

In districts infested with Fever and Ague, it has been found infallible as a preventive and irresistible as a remedy. Thousands who resort to it under apprehension of an attack, escape the scourge; and thousands who neglect to avail themselves of its protective qualities in advance, are cured by a very brief course of this marvelous medicine. Fever and Ague patients, after being plied with quinine for months in vain, until fairly saturated with that dangerous alkaloid, are not unfrequently restored to health within a few days by the use of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS.

The weak stomach is rapidly invigorated and the appetite restored by this agreeable Tonic, and hence it works wonders in cases of Dyspepsia and in less confirmed forms of Indigestion, giving, as a gentle and painless aperient, as well as upon the liver, it also invariably relieves the Constipation superinduced, by irregular action of the digestive and secretive organs.

Persons of feeble habit, liable to Nervous Attacks, Lowness of Spirits and Fits of Languor, find prompt and permanent relief from the Bitters. The testimony on this point is most conclusive, and from both sexes.

The agony of Bilious Colic is immediately assuaged by a single dose of the stimulant, and by occasionally resorting to it, the return of the complaint may be prevented.

For Sea Sickness it is a positive specific—either removing the contents of the stomach, and with them the terrible nausea, or relieving the internal irritation by which the disposition to vomit is caused.

As a General Tonic, HOSTETTER'S BITTERS produce effects which must be experienced or witnessed before they can be fully appreciated. In cases of Constit

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.—A VERY VALUABLE property on Newtown Creek, adjoining Hunter's Point and Brooklyn, only one-half mile up the creek from the East River.
The Tract very offered has a water frontage of nine hundred feet, and is the nearest point to the Long Island Railroad, and can be easily reached by the water from any convenient distance to and of cylinder upon Wharves which might be built, or upon the premises of any manufacturing establishment in operation. Extending back the tract containing about 60 acres, will lay out over 200 lots, allowing streets of 200 wide. It is only about one mile from the terminus of four horse-car lines, viz. 10th-st., 23d-st. and 34th-st.
This is a valuable property, embracing so many great and obvious advantages, that it is extremely desirable as an investment for capitalists, to whom it is specially commended. Apply to HOMER MORGAN, No. 2 Pine-st.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.—REAL ESTATE AT PUBLIC AUCTION.—Will be sold, by order of Mary Sutton, on THURSDAY, Feb. 27, 1863, the valuable farm property, the ultimate near the Village of Cantersburg, in the town of Cornwall, Orange County, N. Y., containing 30 acres of very choice land, a large dwelling, barn, and other outbuildings, fruits of almost every variety, and an apple orchard in full bearing. The premises are handsomely located, and well adapted for a private residence or for Summer boarders, for which Cornwall is justly celebrated; it is but a few minutes' walk from the village, where are churches of the various denominations, and only two miles from Cornwall Landing. The above property is now rented for one year at $300 and taxes, and will be sold subject to the lease, the purchaser having the benefit of the same. Terms liberal; and may be known on day of sale. Further information can be had by application to H. Y. CHADEAYNE, Cornwall, N. Y.

LOTS IN CHICAGO FOR SALE.—THE UNDERSIGNED, by order of Court, will sell at public auction, on the 16th day of March, 1863, by GILBERT A. SCRANTON COAL AT AUCTION.
Office of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Co., No. 52 William-st., New-York, Jan. 14, 1863.
The others having used up their weak, we have of coal at public auction, at the Merchants' Exchange, on Monday, the 23d day of December, 1862, will take place on WEDNESDAY, the 25th day of Feb., 1863, at 12 o'clock M., at the same place and at the Merchants' Exchange, Nos. 111 and 113 Broadway, place offer for sale of Williamsport, at which time and place they will offer for sale:
SIMEON DRAPER, Auctioneer.
THIRTY THOUSAND TONS OF FRESH MINED SCRANTON COAL.
embracing all the usual sizes and qualities, deliverable at their Delaware, Elizabethport, N. J., after the 1st of March next. They will repeat such auction sales on or about the 20th of each month during the year 1863.
The sale will be positive. Each lot put up will be sold to the highest bidder; no bids, no sale, nor any given whatever, be offered by auctioneer or any other person, or any person in behalf of the company, for less than the upset price, in bankable funds, to be paid on the day of sale, and the balance in like funds, on delivery of the coal, which will be taken away within thirty days from the day of sale, unless navigation is obstructed. Buyers who wish, however, can have an additional thirty days for taking the delivery of their purchases by making a further deposit of 10 per cent, payable within the ten days after specified. In default of 10 per cent, per annum will be made, and be charged on the balance from the time stipulated for payment until paid, and twenty-five cents per ton to cover the expense of stocking the coal, both to be paid on delivery of the coal.
The other conditions of sale will be substantially those published for the last year, with the exception of the time of arrival from the mines, which will be modified to meet the change of ocean steamers, whose arrival cannot be definitely fixed.
With a reliable avenue from the Lackawanna and Wyoming Valleys to tide-water, open every day in the year, (Sundays excepted,) requiring but 12 hours for the transit of the trains, the transport of such coal, and the superior condition in which the Coal will be delivered, are an approximate guarantee that the trade of selling will commend itself to the favorable consideration of both the Trade and Consumers, whose patronage is respectfully invited.
C. R. ROBERT, President.

GREAT SALE OF PICTURES—INTERNATIONAL ART INSTITUTION.—HENRY H. LEEDS & CO will sell at auction on THURSDAY and FRIDAY, 26th and 27th, at 7½ o'clock each evening, at the old Düsseldorf Gallery, No. 548 Broadway, great sale of Pictures, "International Art Institution," Düsseldorf, Munich, of the highest order of art, of the Düsseldorf, Munich, Dresden and other schools, consigned to Wm. Andermann, Esq., Director, and for the past three years, on exhibition at the corner of Broadway and 4th-st. This collection, now presented to the public, is one of the rarest and most valuable ever exhibited in this country. Among these great works are specimens by Hasselover, Carl Rubner, Jacobe, Grun, Schrader, Kohle, Achenbach, Steinbruck, Schlesinger, Grund, Martin, Lichtenberger, Lauenwitz, Pulland, Sonderland, Bendemann, Hubner, Jordan, &c. Also fine examples of the French school, by Meauvalais, Juliette Boubeuy, De Jonkoe, De Dreux, Tanzeny, Lambert de Mots, Pecrus, Centurier, Dupre, Victor Carvon, Breton, Rosier and others. Also of the schools of Holland and Belgium, by Koekkoek, Van Lerius, Verschuren, Van Kaer, De Vigder, Dillicos, Eurymen, De Brandt, Moes, Ramoy, Carolus, Plasset, Westermarme, Quinsonz, Verwee, &c., together with some fine examples of the English schools, by Shayer, Fyne, Hill, Williams, Beckitt, Adams, Bennett and others. In the Belgian and Dutch in the collection is the last portrait of Baron Alexander von Humboldt, taken from life by Professor Schrader, which so pleased the great savan that he addressed to Mr. Andermann the following letter, the original of which may be seen at the gallery:
Sir: Your should I not be proved, my dear Mr. Andermann, by all the kindness and honor shown to me in the United States of America. My portrait by our great historical painter, Professor Schrader, combines in the highest manner force of delineation, life and with depth of feeling and the most laborious minuteness.
Considering the increased good will bestowed upon me in your country, I hope that the work of a dear friend will find favor in your exhibition.
Please excuse, because I am a very patriarchal age. (durch meine Unalter,) the illegibility of these lines.
I remain, dear Sir,
Yours faithfully,
ALEX. VON HUMBOLDT.
BERLIN, Nov. 5, 1858.
The above collection will be open for exhibition, free to the public, on and from Thursday, the 19th instant, until evenings of sale.

ALL SUFFERERS FROM THE ABOVE complaints, either of recent or long standing, are advised to use BLAIR'S GOUT and RHEUMATIC PILLS. They can be relied upon as the most safe and effectual remedy ever offered to the public, and have been universally used in Europe for many years with the greatest success.

Prepared in England by PROUT & HARSANT, and sold by WELLS & CO., Franklin-st., New-York, and most other medicine vendors.

Her Majesty's Commissioners have authorized the name and address of "Thomas Prout, 229, Strand, London," to be impressed upon the Government stamp affixed to each box of the genuine medicine.

Price 50 cents and $1 per box.

SURE CURE.—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 19 Laight-st. Conducted on the plan of the Hospital day Venerien, Paris, where thousands afflicted with any disease can receive prompt treatment, without risk or exposure, viz.: Syphilis, gonorrhœa, gleet, stricture, blood, tumors, cancer, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years of extensive practice in these exclusively devoted to the treatment of these complaints enable us to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr. Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This nonpoisonous remedy is adapted to the most shattered constitutions, physical disqualifications, impediments to marriage, thereby speedily cured. The man to consult, Dr. Ward and Powers, the champions and kings of venereal diseases, possessing the most certain, speedy and only effectual remedies in the world, guarantee a cure in each case or no charge, in from one to three days. Established in 1834. N. B.—Those who have used their preventives never without advice, and for a circular. To Ladies.—Dr. Powers' Periodical Drops are a safe and certain remedy for menstruation. The above remedies may be sent by mail. The afflicted should read their circular. Postage free, on receipt of a stamp. Cures warranted.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD & CO., No. 19 Laight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the safest, surest and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character, in 30 years' practice he has cured more victims of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one else or will not take your money. Cases of their money and time, which I will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much-neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis, in from one to three days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis, the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Impotency, or Sexual Debility, the result of youthful indiscretion, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance, failing to receive prompt treatment from correspondence, may be permanently cured by writing a full description of their complaint, enclosed to DR. WARD, No. 19 Laight-st., the only place. Call, send or write.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

Its Observance in this City and Vicinity.

Chimes, Parades, Pyrotechnics, Balls and Banquets.

The Municipal Dinner—Speeches by Mayor Opdyke, Hon. John Van Buren, Recorder Hoffman, District-Attorney Hall, Hiram Walbridge, and others.

A GENERAL HOLIDAY.

On no previous occasion has the Anniversary of WASHINGTON'S Birthday been observed so generally as the one just passed. During three entire days, in various ways, various public associations and organizations, civic and military, have testified their respect for the memory of the departed patriot, and a very general participation in the festivities of the celebration was evinced by our citizens at large. Yesterday was the time set apart by the authorities of the City for the official ceremonies in honor of the holiday, and, as will be observed, the programme was not only carried out, but well carried out, in a manner creditable to New-York and worthy of the great name it was intended to honor.

THE DAY,

fortunately, was fine. The heavy fall of snow afforded amplest accommodation for runners, and thousands availed themselves of the granted occasion from work to indulge, for the first time this Winter, in a jolly good sleigh-ride. The several sporting roads were lined with cutters of every shape and size, and many a nag was put to its utmost muscular endeavor by an excited citizen, for the honor of the day. The schools were given a holiday, and the merry youngsters improved the opportunity to fight mimic battles with snow-white balls, to slide down well trodden hills, and to march in uniform step with those of larger growth, who carried muskets, and deal on occasion in balls of more weight than the fey ones referred to.

AT SUNRISE

the conscientious militia men, whose duty it was to salute with a hundred cannon the incoming day, roused the inhabitants of many a square around by the thundering sound of the minute-fired guns, and announced to the listening City that the anniversary was upon it.

AT NOON, THE CHIMES

of old Trinity rang out the following programme, under the skillful manipulation of Mr. JAMES E. AVELINE:

No. 1.—Ringing the changes on eight bells.
No. 2.—Hail Columbia.
No. 3.—Yankee Doodle.
No. 4.—Home, Sweet Home.
No. 5.—Blue Bells of Scotland.
No. 6.—Rondo, with variations, on major and minor keys, composed by Geo. F. Bristow.
No. 7.—Star Spangled Banner.
No. 8.—Airs from Child of the Regiment.
No. 9.—Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean.

A large crowd gathered near the head of Wall-street to listen to the melodious notes, and very general gratification was manifested at the success which attended the efforts of the player.

The Military Parade.

The military display suffered severely in consequence of the deep snow which clogged the streets and parade-grounds. Marching was very difficult but the men managed to keep a good line and attracted considerable attention as they passed along the different streets. None of the regiments turned out near their complement of men, and in fact such could not be expected in these war times.

THE SEVENTH REGIMENT.

The various companies of this regiment assembled at their armory at 1 o'clock. About 700 members were present. The line was formed at 2 P. M. in Lafayette-place, the right resting on Fourth-street. The regiment was commanded by Lieut.-Col. PARIS, and marched by the flank through Fourth-street to Broadway, thence to Union-square and around the Washington Monument and then dismissed. There was a large assemblage of spectators on each side of Broadway from Fourth-street to Union-square, and several hearty cheers were given as the troops passed.

THE EIGHTH REGIMENT.

This regiment presented a good appearance. It formed in line of march near their Armory, and proceeded down Broadway to City Hall Park, where a presentation took place. The men, of course, experienced much difficulty in marching on account of the bad condition of the streets. The regiment was viewed by a large crowd of people on Broadway and in the Park.

THE ELEVENTH REGIMENT.

At 1½ P. M., Acting Adjutant BERRERS formed the regiment in line in Second-avenue, the right on Fourth-street. About 600 members were present. The regiment marched through Second-avenue, Second-street, Bond-street and down Broadway to the City Hall, where they were reviewed by the Mayor and Common Council, after which they returned to their armory in Delancey-street and were dismissed.

THE TWENTY-SECOND REGIMENT.

In consequence of some misunderstanding in regard to the orders for parading, many of the members supposing that it was decided not to turn out the regiment, but about 300 men of the Twenty-second appeared. The line was formed by Adjutant MCGEATE, on the north side of Union-square, the right on Broadway. Col. ACKERWALL then marched the troops through Fourth-avenue, the Bowery, Canal-street and up Broadway to Union-square, where they were dismissed. Lieut.-Col. J. H. GRANT and Major G. F. COX, newly appointed field officers, appeared on parade yesterday for the first time.

THE SEVENTY-FIRST REGIMENT.

This regiment turned out a comparatively large number of men. The troops were cheerful, and did not seem to be seriously annoyed at the immense piles of snow which lay in their way. They marched down Broadway to City-Hall Park, where they were reviewed by the Mayor. They then returned to their armory and dispersed.

Presentation of Colors to the Eighth Regiment.

At 3 o'clock P. M., the Eighth Regiment, National Guard, Col. VARIAN, formed in line in front of the City Hall to receive the stand of colors which was ordered by the regiment by the Common Council at the commencement of the war. The colors consist of a State and City flag and two guide colors—red and blue. They were manufactured by Councilman BRADLEY, at an expense of $236. The material is silk, and the coats of arms of the State and City are beautifully wrought in chenille.

Mayor OPDYKE, accompanied by several members of the Common Council and the Sergeant-at-Arms, came out of the City Hall and advanced to the centre of the line, when His Honor presented the colors to Col. VARIAN, prefaced by the following remarks:

ADDRESS OF MAYOR OPDYKE.

Col. VARIAN: It is my agreeable duty to present you, in the name of the City, a stand of colors for the regiment under your command. These colors were ordered by the Common Council at the outbreak of the rebellion, but before their completion you and your command had patriotically responded to your country's call, by hastening to the theatre of war. Their presentation has thus been delayed, which has enabled you to earn a fresh title to them in the performance of actual service in the field. It was your privilege, while thus engaged, to meet the enemies of your country in deadly strife; and, although the fortune of war was against us on that occasion, the thorough discipline of your command, combined with their sturdy courage and ardent patriotism, enabled your regiment to maintain the high military reputation of the citizen soldiers of this metropolis. Colonel, I place these flags in your hands, with an abiding confidence that their honor will never be tarnished. These starry folds symbolize principles of Government as pure and just as any that have ever been embodied in constitutions and laws. Viewed in this light, the flags which I present you cannot fail to fire the heart and nerve the arm of the patriot soldier against the enemies of our Government, whether domestic or foreign. Take them, so an earnest of the City's confidence in the high qualities, both of your rank and your command; and if it shall be your fortune to carry them into battle, may God shield you and your colors and soon unite you, in hearing them onward to victory.

COL. VARIAN'S REPLY.

Col. VARIAN, on receiving the stand of colors, said that he accepted them on behalf of his command with feelings of gratitude to the Common Council, and to the Mayor for the kindly and flattering terms in which the gift had been tendered. As for himself, he would have taken no part in this ceremony had he not felt assured that every man in his command stood ready to defend these colors, and fight for the flag of his country whenever and wherever called upon. The Stars and Stripes were destined to wave over this free country as heretofore, in spite of enemies without or traitors within; nor did he believe there was a Tower on earth sufficiently formidable to prevent the American flag from once more floating over every foot of soil in the national domain. To effect this object, the services of himself and of his command were ever ready, as heretofore, to respond to their country's call.

At the close of the presentation, the regiment passed in review before the Mayor, and was followed by the Eleventh and Seventy-first regiments. A large concourse of people were gathered in the Park to witness the presentation and review.

The Fire-Works.

The display of fire-works at City Hall Park and Union Square, although not so varied as that upon some previous occasions, yet apparently gave eminent satisfaction to the thousands who assembled to witness them. At 7 o'clock, the programme was commenced at each place by lights of rockets, followed by innumerable shells, bengalas, colored battle-jes, and other minor pieces, which continued to illumine the sky for over an hour. The principal piece at the Park consisted of a colossal equestrian statue of Gen. WASHINGTON seated on his famous charger, with the motto "Facit amor Patriæ," encircled over head, and the words "The Union Must and Shall be Preserved," lined at the base. Upon either side was a figure of "Liberty and Justice," the whole piece being surrounded with thirty-four stars. This was the finale of the exhibition at the Park.

AT UNION-SQUARE

there was gathered a great crowd, which manifested every sign of delight in the patriotic pyrotechnics displayed. The pieces which seemed most to excite the admiration of the spectators were the bombs, which caused a report not unlike that produced by a 12-pounder, and obtained a very high altitude. The concussion was so great that several panes of glass in the windows of adjacent houses were shattered. The rockets were not as good as usual, a number of them having prematurely exploded. It would have been better if the rockets had received more inclination, as a number of the sticks came rushing down amidst the crowd at nearly the same place from which they were sent up. No accident from this cause was reported, but certainly the people were not wholly out of the reach of danger.

Taking the exhibition altogether, it was a very fine display. What was wanting in revolving wheels and similar fancy pieces, was made up in bengolas, bombs, &c. The crowd expressed their gratification at the entertainment in numerous ejaculatory monosyllables, and at the end of the exhibition quietly dispersed.

The Municipal Banquet.

Although the complex character of the City Government compels the municipal fathers to keep somewhat aloof from one another in the performance of official duties, the annual commemoration of WASHINGTON'S Birthday is certain, as it did last evening, to give occasion for a delightful reunion. Indeed, no better illustration could be given of the magnitude of the Metropolitan Government than the fact that so many of its members are personally unacquainted with each other. The dinner at the St. Nicholas was well worthy the occasion, and served with all the completeness which the most fastidious Aldermanic appetite could demand. The bill of fare would tax our columns. Let it suffice to say that all the luxuries and delicacies in and out of season were on the table, garnished with ornaments whose beauty was only rivaled by their appropriateness. Among them were the following: New-York City Coat-of-Arms, New-York State Coat-of-Arms, Pavilion à l'Impératrice, La Chapelle à la Romaine, Statue of St. Nicholas, Grand Vase des Fleurs, Bust of Washington, Lighthouse of Naples, Porte de Triomphe, the Three Graces, Cornucopia, Nougat Pyramids.

About two hundred guests sat down to the six festive boards at the hour of 8:40 P. M. At the main table Mayor OPDYKE presided. On his right were United States Senator Morgan, A. W. Craven, Chief Engineer of the Croton Aqueduct Department; Hiram Walbridge, Alderman Boole, Judge Sutherland and District-Attorney Hall. At his left were Aldermen Ottiwell, Judge Hoffman, Hon. John Van Buren, D. T. Valentine, the venerable Clerk of the Common Council; Supervisor Ely and Judge McCunn. Among the gentlemen who occupied the other tables were Judges Barbour, Leonard, McCarthy and Hilton; Messrs. S. J. Tilden, Hon. Anson Herrick, R. C. Hutchings, C. E. Cornell, and most of the Heads of Departments and members of the Common Council. Amongst the following Committee of Arrangements: Aldermen Jacob M. Long, Francis I. A. Boole, James Reed, John Hardy, John D. Ottiwell. Councilmen James Hayes, John McConnell, Michael C. Gross, John Houghtaling, John Brice.

The Committee, however, could hardly be said to sit anywhere, for they were everywhere present, looking after the welfare of their guests. At precisely 10:30 P. M., Mayor OPDYKE called the assemblage to order in the following appropriate terms:

SPEECH OF MAYOR OPDYKE.

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with a resolution of the Common Council of this City, we meet this evening to honor the memory of WASHINGTON by celebrating the 131st anniversary of his birth. It is meet that this event, so auspicious to the cause of popular government, should be made the sacred remembrance by every friend of civil liberty throughout the world. A portion of our countrymen, regardless of his teachings and warnings, have basely attempted to break up the glorious Union which WASHINGTON did so much to create, and to bring to dismemberment and shame the starry symbol under which he and our fathers fought. For nearly two years they have obstinately resisted its authority. In this unholy work, they have displayed an energy and determination worthy of a better cause. They have taxed their resources to the utmost, and have succeeded, by an extensive conscription, in bringing into the field an army of at least 500,000 men. Nor is this all. Through appeals to the navy and hatred which our successful experiment in Democratic government has engendered in the hearts of all aristocrats and despots, they have secured the earnest sympathy of two leading Governments of Europe. This sympathy is not wholly passive, but over and anon crops out in acts of unfriendliness to us, and in threats of intervention. With such an enemy, thus active and adroit, and stimulated by the hope of foreign alliances of the most formidable character, it becomes every friend of the Constitution and Union, the glorious inheritance bequeathed to us by WASHINGTON and his colaborers, to stand firm as the overtaxing hills in their defence. All party questions should be postponed, all party discord hushed into silence, until their supremacy is secured by the perfect establishment of the National authority throughout the land. If the rebels should succeed in making an offensive alliance against us with Great Britain and France, or with either of them, it would present a combination of hostile power which could not fail to excite the anxiety of every lover of his country. But it would also, I trust, nerve every loyal heart to meet it in the undaunted spirit of him who said,

"Come one, come all, this rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I."

(Applause.)

The Mayor then read the first regular toast, as follows:

The Memory of Washington—If his countrymen revere it, let them heed his counsels and imitate his example.

RESPONSE BY HON. JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

He said that in all ages the people had delighted to honor the names of great and good men, and, in following in the same habit, those in attendance were there to honor the memory of GEORGE WASHINGTON. It was well to honor such a memory. GEORGE WASHINGTON has more than any other given us the institutions we had enjoyed and advice by which they might be perpetuated. It was well to revere his memory now when so many, through infidelity to his counsels, were endeavoring to destroy the Government he did so much to build up. Since his decease what changes had we seen. Instead of the modest boat by which those who would visit his tomb, there were gunboats, armed men and all the panoply of war. And within the sight of the Capitol he adorned, the fields had been whitened by the dents of soldiers there ready to sacrifice their lives for its protection. He had no hesitation in declaring that and those now in rebellion duly considered duly regarded the counsels of the Father of his Country, we would still have had a happy, peaceful and prosperous country, and a united people. (Applause.) At so late an hour there was not time to speak at any length of the life of WASHINGTON. In conclusion, he read extracts from the Farewell Address, and applied them to the present condition of the country. He referred to the fact that in his time he, too, was found fault with; and that conspiracies were formed against him; and he believed that if WASHINGTON were alive to-day, there were many who would be enraged against him. They would consider him too slow; he would have too high an opinion of lines of base and retreat, and depots of supplies; he would have too great a regard for the laws (applause) and their enforcement. (Applause.) There were now living a man to whom such objections were equally applicable—a Revolutionary Sire, late hostile, may God aid you and your military cause and soon unite you, in hearing them onward to victory.

The Ball of the Washington Light Guard.

One of the most brilliant, and the best-appointed, ball of the season, came off last evening at the City Assembly Rooms, in Broadway. It was given by the members of Company B, Twelfth Regiment, New-York State Militia, known as the "Washington Light Guard," in commemoration of the birthday of that great patriot from whom the company takes its name. There were present the members of the regiment, besides a large number of invited guests, including many distinguished military gentlemen, among whom we noticed several members of the veteran Gen. WOOL'S Staff. The ladies comprised more than one-half of the assemblage, and added to the elegance of the affair by the magnificence of their attire. The hall-room, which is an extremely commodious one, was brilliantly illuminated, and handsomely decorated with the Stars and Stripes and the colors of the Regiment. The programme comprised twenty-five dances, the music for which was performed by ROSENBERG'S Band. The gentlemen who constituted the Committee were untiring in their efforts to render the occasion as agreeable one to all, and, as far as we are able to judge, they succeeded admirably. The dancing commenced with a quadrille, at about ten o'clock, and with the exception of the time devoted to supper, lasted until the "wee hours of morning." It was estimated that the number of tickets sold for this ball could not have been less than eight hundred. The following named gentlemen were among the Committee: Messrs. ALLE, BAUER, DANIZER, HOFF, DEBEVOIS, BERGMANN, BUSSEY, QUINN, GOSSIN, and Mr. JOHN R. DUGAN, Floor Manager.

Dinner of the Employer-Printers at the St. Nicholas.

The association of Employer-Printers gave their first annual celebration at the St. Nicholas Hotel last evening. JOHN F. TROW, Esq., President, occupied the chair, supported on the right by Rev. Dr. Cox, and on the left by Prof. OWEN, of Yale College. Among the other invited guests present were GEORGE BAKER, (the elder) type-founder; Mr. MCKELLAR, of Philadelphia; BARON L. LOSSING, A. R. P. WELCH, of the University Press, (Cambridge, Mass.;) Mr. HOUGHTON, of the Riverside (Mass.) Press, and Mr. HENRY O'REILLY, of New-York. The tables were appropriately decorated with statues of FRANKLIN and GUTTENBERG, monument to WASHINGTON, La Belle Hollandaise, Nougat Pyramids, and a petit representation of Amour and Hymen.

The dinner having been disposed of, a series of thirteen toasts were taken up in order, and appropriately responded to.

The proceedings did not close until after 2 o'clock this morning.

Seventh Annual Festival of the North Woods Walton Club.

The members of this good-humored fraternity met last night at the Astor House, according to their annual custom, to elect members and officers for the current year, and decide in what part of the "wilderness" they would locate the camping-ground for rusication during the hot weather. After a brief delay—which was the occasion of several humorous observations by members of the Club—the Committee on Nominations made its appearance, and announced the following list of candidates:

President.....E. W. Dodge.
Vice-President.....David Banks.
Second Vice-President.....W. B. Taylor.
Secretary.....C. M. Schofield.
Recording Secretary.....W. T. Lonsdale.
Marshal.....Richard W. Owen.

These gentlemen were elected nem con, and the new President, on being introduced, made a modest speech of about nineteen words, which was received with great and deserved applause. The "time for going into the wilderness," after a brief discussion, was fixed for Tuesday, the 24d of June, the rendezvous being at Utica, and it was decided that the camp should be located on "Fourth Lake," which, we understand, is somewhere in "John Brown's Tract." Upon some one proposing that the camp should if possible "be this time located near water," the mover of this resolution dryly observed that as the camp was to be on a lake, he thought that unless the lake should dry up, they would probably find themselves near water, under the former resolution. When one member ventured to expatiate on the necessity of a "guide," our informant cautioned him as this business was in Gen. FREMONT'S line, and he had nothing else to do, perhaps they had better engage him. Several observations of the nature served to keep the company in good humor, and presently the Club went down to dinner, which was served in the tea-room, on the first floor. About fifty gentlemen, including reporters, sat down at the handsomely-arranged tables, and were soon very pleasantly engaged in discussing the exquisitely-prepared viands of the bill of fare, provided under the immediate superintendence of Mr. J. T. WEEKS, steward of the Astor House. On the wall near the foot of the great table was displayed a well-painted picture of "Camp Dodge," the rustic retreat of the Club two seasons ago, in the northern part of Hermkier County.

The cloth was removed in good season, and toasts, speeches and songs succeeded in such profusion that it would be idle to attempt to detail them particularly. Let it suffice to say that everything passed off most agreeably, and the disciples of gentle old IZAAK WALTON proved themselves a most numerous and gentlemanly body, sensible enough to enjoy themselves in a rational manner, whether in town or country.

Among the distinguished guests was Hon. JAMES M. COOX, formerly State Comptroller, and a candidate for nomination for the office of Governor at the last election.

Capital speeches, in response to toasts, were made by the President, Mr. Dodge, Mr. Chauncey Schaffer, Charles S. Spencer, Esq., Charles Whitehead, Esq., T. Jones, Jr., Hon. James M. Cook—who made a most charming little impromptu address, full of mellow humor—O. L. Stewart, (Assistant District-Attorney,) and others.

The Day in Brooklyn.

The flags were displayed from the City Hall and other public buildings, and the various liberty poles throughout the city, in honor of the occasion. The Seventieth Regiment of Cavalry met at the State Arsenal, in Portland-avenue, in the morning, and marched through the principal streets of the city, preceded by a mounted band. The Twenty-eighth Regiment also turned out, and marched through some of the principal thoroughfares. They attracted considerable attention. At sundown Capt. Dazzo fired a national salute from Fort Greene, in compliance with a resolution of the Common Council. In the evening the annual distribution of premiums took place at the Brooklyn Institute, in Washington-street. OLIVER HULL, Esq., presided, and made an address appropriate to the occasion—previous to which C. F. SAUNE, Esq., presented the Institution with a portrait of ISAAC NEWTON, Esq., the late acting President. The premiums were then distributed to the most deserving pupils, when the meeting adjourned. The Cadets of Temperance (Mercantile Section) gave an entertainment at the Athenæum, last evening, in honor of the occasion. There was a large attendance. The exercises consisted of recitations, dialogues, &c. The Navy-yard Band was in attendance.

Washington's Birthday in Jersey City.

This day was observed yesterday in Jersey City by the closing of the city offices, banks and public schools. Flags were displayed from all the public buildings, the ferry-boats and many of the private residences.

Washington's Birthday in Newark.

Yesterday was celebrated in Newark as the anniversary of the birth of WASHINGTON. It was very [illegible] Flags were displayed from all the public buildings, and many of the private residences. The Common Council, at a special meeting held on Saturday night, made provision for having the National emblem hoisted on the City staff, and for the ringing of the bells of the various churches, morning, noon and night, which was done with free effect. Many of the stores were closed, and, on the whole, the day was much better observed than was expected. The sleighing was capital, and Broad-street was thronged all day with fast teams and the city was vocal with the "sweet music" of bells.

Washington's Birthday.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

WASHINGTON'S Birthday was celebrated here to-day with a great display of flags, ringing of bells and firing of salutes.

Washington's Birthday in Boston.

BOSTON, Monday, Feb. 23.

The observation of WASHINGTON'S Birthday has been quite general. Bells were rung and salutes fired. The public offices and many private stores were closed throughout the day.

Washington's Birthday at Portland.

PORTLAND, Me., Monday, Feb. 23.

WASHINGTON'S Birthday was celebrated here by the partial suspension of business, by a national salute, the ringing of bells, and exercises in the City Hall.

The Case of Major McKinstry.

We learn from a Washington dispatch in the Cincinnati Commercial that the order in McKINSTRY'S case shows he was found guilty on the charge preferred, viz., neglect and violation of duty, to the prejudice of good order and discipline—and upon twenty-six of the specifications, in whole or in part. The order, after setting forth the specifications and findings at length, proceeds:

And the Court does therefore sentence Major Justus McKinstry, Quartermaster United States Army, to be dismissed the service.

5. The foregoing proceedings, findings and sentence are hereby approved, excepting the discretion given by Article 10 of the Rules and Articles of War, the execution of sentence is suspended until the pleasure of the President of the United States can be known, upon the recommendation of some members of the Court for a remission or mitigation of the sentence; this suspension and the proceedings of the Court-martial being transmitted to the President for his determination.

(Signed,) W. H. HALLECK,
General-in-Chief.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.

The following are the orders of the President:

The sentence in the foregoing case will be carried into execution by the dismissal of Major Justus McKINSTRY, Quartermaster United States Army, from the service of the United States.

(Signed,) A. LINCOLN.

Misfortune of being too Celebrated.

Notwithstanding our little townsman Mr. CHAS. S. STRATTON, or, as we are wont to call him, Gen. Tom Thumb, issued twenty-five hundred invitations to the Bridal Reception held at his mother's house on Thursday last, the desire to see him and his tiny bride seems greater than ever. Whenever these timibleful of humanity appear, they are instantly surrounded by a crowd of old and young. Their every movement is watched, and if they venture out of the house they are noticed upon by the crowd which is always in waiting. If they ride out, their carriage is pursued by pedestrians and equestrians, who form a train more numerous (as well as more motley) than that of any monarch in the universe. If they come into our city on a "shopping" excursion, the store which they happen to patronize is filled with new customers who cram every corner, mount chairs and counters, and place the windows, show-cases and goods of the unhappy merchant in extreme peril. The little General complains that he is obliged to encounter similar troubles in whatever town or city he and his petite wife chance to visit. If they venture out of their room when in a hotel, they are instantly surrounded by the Brobdingnagian multitude, and in several instances they have been nearly suffocated within the living wall which suddenly surrounded them! Their parlor and dining-room are frequently invaded by an army of curiosity mongers, and nothing short of a double lock and a pair of patent bolts has proved sufficiently powerful to preserve the sanctity of their bed-chamber! This infinitesimal man and wife propose to visit Europe soon, but their fame has, of course, already preceded them, and the momentous question arises, what can they do to arrest this terrible result of too much notoriety? We beg leave to suggest that the General should revise and reverse his decision that his wife shall not be exhibited. We understand that the little lady herself is not adverse to public exhibitions, but on the contrary that she "rather likes it." This being the case, let them hold public levees in our large cities and towns and charge fifty cents or a dollar per ticket of admission. If the General feels that he is already rich enough he will find plenty of worthy charitable objects that will make good use of his money. At all events it is very evident that with all their wealth, Mr. CHARLES S. STRATTON and his beautiful little wife, Mrs. LAVINIA WARREN STRATTON, can find no peace at home or abroad until in some way public curiosity is satisfied.—Bridgeport Evening Standard.
